IDAHO learns that a world court senator can learn from returns in other states. Senator Gooding of Idaho, voted for the world court, in the senate, 'like a good administration senator" and is now runing for re-election, on a platform that declared undying opposition to the world court or any other alliance with European nations. Senator Gooding goes all the way, telling his constitutents that if he had it to do over again, he would vote against the world court.

THE League of Nations complains that Germany is secretly building up a fighting force. Germany is getting ready to fight, of course, and that cannot be prevented. Her people are working hard, her scientists are as able as ever. Her men of 30 have, every one had hard military training and her boys are all trained also.

ABOVE all Germany is rich, "more gold shipped to Germany." You read, every few days. The mark is at par and expected to go above par. Imagine how that must impress France, with her franc below three cents, wealth and scientific knowledge and a hard working trained citizenship mean capacity to fight. Airplanes are quickly built and can be bought.

EUROPE'S salavation lies in just dealing and imitation of our arrangements here, with 48 states on one continent, all enjoying free trade and friendly rivalry from ocean to ocean.

VICE PRESIDENT DAWES, 61 years old, shows how a man should be at 61. He has the energy of a man of 30 at hand. If he should be elected president, fulfilling the plans of many friends, he would be in fact a president of 40 and not 60.

AMERICANS are living more sanely, carrying sound health past 50, exercising body as well as mind. A big fortune or other success is no longer the partner of a ruined digestion and broken down constitution, as it was once.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 7.—Patrolman Terrance Cunning was shot and seriously wounded today by bandits who stole a payroll of approximately $10,000 from a colored messenger of the Ward Baking company and his guard.

The hold-up occurred near the baking company's office. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

5,400 PUPILS ENROLLED ON OPENING DAY

Few Freshmen Hazed Although Police Are on Job.

FACES PAINTED

Four Hundred Children Resume Studies in Parochial School.

Public and parochial schools reopened today with an enrollment estimated at 5,400—a record-breaker for the first day in East Liverpool.

Exact figures in the public schools were not available early this afternoon, although they are expected to reach the 5,000 mark when reports are available from all buildings. The registration in the parochial school will total about 400.

Schools were dismissed immediately after registration until this afternoon. Books were distributed and lessons for tomorrow were assigned at the afternoon session, and school work will begin in earnest Wednesday morning.

Police were on the job about the high school building this morning to guard against hazing of freshmen by upper classmen. The presence of four patrolmen had its effect upon the students. However, a few cases of hazing were reported to the school authorities. A few of the freshmen students who appeared at the building with their faces and hands painted, were permitted to return to their homes. The customary ducking which many freshmen have been forced to undergo in previous years was not resorted to, school officials said.

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Postal receipts in 50 selected cities in August totaled $26,714,198.44, an increase of $1,629,657.54, or 6.50 per cent, over the same month a year ago, the post office department announced today.

Cities that led in percentage were Fort Worth, 50.90; Atlanta, 26.33; Los Angeles, 21.97; and Dayton, Ohio, 21.28.

HUGE RUM RING IS UNDER FIRE

By PAUL E. BROKAW

CANTON, O., Sept. 7.—Sheriff T. W. Kirk and two deputies left here today for Cleveland, where they expected to take Louis Mazer, indicted for murder in connection with the Don. R. Mellett assassination, into custody.

Mazer is now being held by federal authorities there.

Resume Hunt for McDermott.

Federal agents, working "under cover" in several large cities today were reported to be investigating a huge bootlegging ring with a view to exposing the "higher-ups" in the murder.

The goverment operatives gathering evidence in the liquor conspiracy, out of which the slaying is claimed to have grown, were said to be working on ramifications of the ring in Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Pittsburgh today. Evidence which they gather will be turned over to a federal grand jury scheduled to convene in Cleveland next week.

Necessity for a confession to corroborate the circumstantial evidence upon which Mazer, Ben Rudner and Patrick McDermott have been indicted, spurred authorities to more intense action in the nationwide search for McDermott.

McDermott, sought as the alleged hired triggerman and "key witness" has successfully evaded apprehension for nearly two months.

Because a brilliant beam of publicity was thrown upon his escape and because practically every police department in the nation, has been advised to be on the alert for him, the theory that McDermott was murdered by the Mellett death plotters has been advanced many times.

Ollie Harvey, colored, St. Clair avenue, is at liberty under bond today pending settlement of a $500 fine, assessed against him by Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley yesterday morning after he pleaded guilty to a charge of the illegal possession of intoxicating liquors.

About 400 bottles of home brew were found under a stairway in the Harvey home when Captain Conley and Desk Sergeant Toland raided his home at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night.

Police claim that this is Harvey's third liquor law violation. He was fined $100 and costs when arraigned before Judge Hanley on his second offense about four months ago.

Funeral services were held yesterday for Warren, 11 months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bettis, of Salineville, who died Saturday, as a result of being scalded when he accidentally upset a cup of coffee.

TERRIFIC RAIN FLOODS PART OF WELLSVILLE

West End Partially Inundated Saturday Night.

GAS CUT OFF

Inter-city Highway is Millrace, Trolley Service Hit.

Saturday night's heavy rainstorm, the second in two weeks, breaking out in a terrific downpour shortly after 8 o'clock and continuing thereafter in abated force, wreaked most of its havoc in Wellsville. East Liverpool suffered little, if any, damage aside from small slips and mud-covered streets.

The west end of Wellsville, washed out in sections when the McQueen's run sewer broke under stress of huge rocks and logs, again was partially inundated Saturday night.

At Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection, water filled one thoroughfare to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car traffic during the night. The traction company brought into use one of its busses, which transferred passengers from Seventeenth street to the Eighteenth street and Clark avenue stop until the water was drained off Sunday morning.

Several scores of cellars in the district were filled with water which backed up to as far as Fourteenth street.

Gas Line Snaps.

Wellsville's gas supply was cut off at 5 o'clock Sunday morning when the line broke in two places and impro-

NEW EARTHQUAKE FELT IN HORTA

LISBON, Sept. 7.—New earthquakes have been felt in Horta, Fayal Island, according to reports received here today.

Although the quakes have been slight they have thrown the population into new panics.

Streets in Horta are still closed due to obstructions from the recent earthquakes and fear that new tremors may cause more buildings to fall.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—American consular business in Horta is being conducted from a small kitchen, which also serves as living quarters, Horace Remillard, American consul, advised the state department today. He did not say whether the consulate had been destroyed or had been made unsafe by the recent earthquake.

All dwellings in Horta are unsafe for occupancy, and requests have been sent to Lisbon for portable houses, Remillard said. He asked for two of the portable buildings, one for use as an office, the other as a dwelling.

COURT BLOCKS DISMISSAL OF ST. CLAIRSVILLE MURDER TRIAL

Mike Dragovich is Charged With Slaying Sheriff.

JURORS CALLED

Gun Expert Claims Deputy's Pistol Killed Samuel Dunfee.

ST CAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 7. — When Mike Dragovich, Provident Ohio, miner, was called before Judge W. W. Cowen in common pleas court here today to answer a first degree murder charge for the assassination of Sheriff Sam L. Dunfee, the defense asked for the dismissal of the charge.

The court overruled the motion.

Calling of petit jurors was started at once.

The defense asked the dismissal on the grounds that a gun expert had declared the bullet which killed Dunfee was fired from a Deputy's gun. The court announced he had a deposition from the alleged gun expert, admitting he was not to be regarded as an expert on firearms.

The action created much excitement in the courtroom.

A careful check up Monday lasting far into the night, disclosed that at least 27 persons met their death when the speeding Scenic Limited left the rails and plunged into the icy waters of the Arkansas river, while six are reported missing and fifty more or less seriously injured.

A coroner's inquest has been postponed until two bodies known to be in the wreckage on the river bed are recovered.

A decree dissolving the artillery corps is already drawn up but has not yet been signed by the king.

THREE YOUTHS ARRRESTED FOR CHECK-KITING

Two Others Sought for Issuance of Worthless Paper.

ONE ARRAIGNED

Accused of Operations in Many District Cities.

Alleged operation of five East Liverpool youths, who it is claimed, have been circulating worthless checks in this city, Lisbon, Salem, Columbiana, Warren and other nearby places have been halted with the arrest of three of the five suspects, police said today.

John Densmore, 21, charged with being the leader of the gang, was held for grand jury action upon a charge of forgery by Justice M. K. Zimerman, Lisbon. Harry Martin, 20, and Andrew Siddell, 18, are in the county jail awaiting arraignment. Police are seeking two other alleged confederates.

The youths are charged with having circulated more than 50 bogus checks. Densmore, who, police say, was released from the industrial school a few months ago when he reached the age of 21, was specifically charged with having given C. O. Hawk, Lisbon automobile dealer, a forged check for $135 as part payment on a car. Most of the checks given by the boys are alleged to have been signed "Harry Cartwright," East Liverpool pottery manufacturer, and were made payable at the First National and Dollar Savings banks.

Siddell claims that he had no part in the forgery operations but merely acted as the driver for the others. One of the two still at large is alleged to have cashed a check in East Liverpool and taken the money to Lisbon with which to pay the fine of his father who was in the county jail on a liquor violation charge.

J. R. Richardson, proprietor of a kennel near Columbiana, told police Monday that Densmore had given him a bogus check for $50 as payment for a dog which he purchased about two weeks ago. The dog was located in Midland and returned to Richardson yesterday.

Roumanian Queen Postpones Journey To United States

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Queen Marie of Roumania has postponed her departure for the United States, because she refused to travel in anything less than a royal suite, and the royal suites on the largest liners are already engaged by Americans who have thus far shown no inclination to give up the regal splendor of those suites for even Queen Marie.

LOIS A. NOBLE RUN DOWN ON RIVER ROAD BY WILLIAM WARE

Child Struck by Car as She Steps From Bus.

SKULL FRACTURED

Four Persons Killed Near Detroit; One at Hyannis, Mass.

Lois Alberta Noble, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Noble, West Sixth street, is dead today, as the result of a fractured skull suffered at 10:45 o'clock yesterday morning when struck by an automobile said by the police to have been driven by William Ware, 1418 Pennsylvania avenue, just after she stepped from a bus near the Colonial pottery on the River road. The child died at the City hospital yesterday afternoon.

Coroner Conducts Inquest.

Coroner J. M. Van Fossan, East Palestine, arrived here today to conduct an inquest. Several witnesses were heard at Wellsville this morning but the case was continued until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The child, accompanied by her elder sister, Sarah, 14, was carrying dinner to her grandfather, John Densmore, Sr. kiln fireman at the Colonial pottery when the accident occurred. The sisters had just stepped from the bus and were walking along the concrete road before crossing to the pottery when Ware's car, the police report says, struck the younger child. The fender of the machine hit the girl on the head, knocking her to the street.

Ware picked up the child and took her to the hospital where Dr. H. A. Turk attended her. The body was removed to the C. N. MacLean undertaking establishment in Wellsville.

Funeral Services Thursday.

The Noble family formerly resided in Wellsville but recently have been living near Hanoverton preparatory to moving to Midland they were residing temporarily with Mrs. Noble's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Densmore, West Sixth street. The parents and one sister survive.

Funeral services will be conducted in the home of the victim's aunt, Mrs. S. G. Wilson, Commerce street, Wellsville at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Burial will be made in Spring Hill cemetery.

5 DEAD, 50 HURT IN RAIL WRECK

Locomotive Telescopes Two Coaches of Excursion Train.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Four separate inquiries were under way today to fix responsibility for the disastrous wreck on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad here last night in which five persons are known to have been killed and at least 50 others injured.

Beside the official railroad investigation, city, county and federal authorities are conducting inquiries.

The wreck occurred when a fast southbound suburban train crashed rear-on into a crowded southbound excursion train while the latter was unloading passengers at a Claybourne station, inside the Chicago city limits.

The last two coaches of the excursion train were telescoped by the locomotive of the rear train.

2,000,000 VOTERS MARCH TO POLLS TO SETTLE PRIMARY CONTESTS FOR FIVE SENATE SEATS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Upwards of two million voters are marching to the polls today in widely scattered sections of the country to settle primary contests involving five seats in the United States senate, and a multitude of lesser offices.

In many respects it is the biggest day of the pre-election political season. From New Hampshire, in New England, to Wisconsin, in the midwest, and out to Nevada and Arizona, in the far southwest, the balloting is in progress today.

In three of these states, Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Nevada, the contests are sharp and the results may have far-reaching effect on the make-up of the seventieth congress. In the other two, Massachusetts and Arizona, the principal fireworks will be reserved until November.

Eyes on Wisconsin.

Political leaders in both parties are chiefly interested in the outcome in Wisconsin, where the La Follette organization is hard after the scalp of Senator Irvine L. Lenroot. The campaign has been a bitter one, even in a state noted for the warmth of its political contests, and the issue between the LaFollette and anti-LaFollette organizations is likely to be close. Senator Lenroot is opposed by Gov. John J. Blaine, a political lieutenant of the late "Fighting Bob."

Lenroot has been savagely attacked for his leadership in the World Court fight in the senate, and for his general record of supporting the legislative policies of the Coolidge administration, as opposed to the principles of "La Follette progressivism." The fight has been complicated enormously, however, by the injection of a variety of state issues involving the governorship.

The betting in Washington is that Lenroot will be beaten, despite the fact he is the only senatorial candidate who has been aided in his fight for renomination by a personal endorsement by President Coolidge.

New Hampshire Fight.

In New Hampshire, there is a keen contest between Senator George H. Moses, one of the original irreconcilables, and ex-Gov. Robert P. Bass, who has attacked Moses for straying off the Colidge reservation on a variety of issues. Bass is running as a simon-pure Coolidge supporter, and has criticised Moses for his votes against the world court, against woman suffrage, and against farm relief. Moses has countered with the charge that Bass is "spending too much money" in the primary.

The prevailing opinion among capital politicians is that Moses will win, although there is a good deal of uneasiness among his friends and supporters as to how the woman vote will go.

In Nevada there is a double-barrelled contest. Senator D. O. Roberts, who, among other things, is the father-in-law of Walter Johnson, the capital's favorite pitcher. The outcome is said to be in doubt.

Among the Nevada Democrats there is also a contest for the senatorial nomination with Raymond T. Baker, former director of the mint, who married Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, favored to win.

In Massachusetts the primary will be held a week from today.

In Arizona, Senator Ralph Cameron has no opposition for renomination by the Republicans. There are two candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination—Representative Carl Hay-

CONDEMNED MAN REFUSED WRIT

Negro Slayer's Only Recourse is Executive Clemency.

The supreme court has refused a writ of error to Henry Jackson, negro life term prisoner in the state penitentiary now under sentence to be hanged next Friday for killing Earl Langfitt, penitentiary guard.

Jackson's hanging had once been postponed by Judge Morris of the Marshall county circuit court to permit the appeal to the supreme court, but the only recourse for the prisoner now would be executive clemency.

Jackson, a native of North Carolina, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life from McDowell county. Langfitt was killed March 11, dying from knife wounds and Jackson was tried and convicted in May. The state witnesses testified the guard was stabbed after he had "taken the number" of the prisoner, apparently for a violation of prison rules at the breakfast table. Jackson, however, claimed that the guard first clubbed him when he refused to finish his breakfast and denied any knowledge of having used a knife in the ensuing scuffle, although admitting he carried one in his pocket.

The negro was first sentenced to be hanged July 2, and his attorneys obtained a writ of mandamus from the supreme court to compel a stay of execution until after their appeal. In obedience to this writ Judge Morris postponed the date of execution to September 10.

REV. EHRHEART EXTENDED CALL

Rev. R. C. Ehrheart, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be returned to Chester for another year if the wishes of members of his congregation are complied with at the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh conference Methodist Episcopal church, which meets at Carnegie, Pa., on Tuesday, October 5.

Members of the Chester church recently voted to extend another call to Rev. Mr. Ehrheart. The assignment of pastors will not be announced until the close of the conference meeting on Monday, October 11.

Rev. Mr. Ehrheart came to Chester a year ago from Conway, Pa., where he was located for three years.

CHESTER TEAM IN TWO GAMES

The Chester Industrial league team will, in all probability, wind up the season with two games this week. Only in the event of a double defeat will the schedule be carried over until next week.

Because of the soggy condition of Patterson field, the contest with the Turk-Nash nine which was to have been played on the East Liverpool lot tonight, has been transferred to Smith field. The game will start promptly at 5:30 o'clock.

The Laughlin nine will be faced at Newell Friday night with the weather man's permission.

If Chester wins tonight's contest with the Turk-Nash outfit, it can lose the remaining games and still be tied for the first place position even though the next highest teams wins its remaining games. With victories tonight and Friday night the championship for the last half of the season will be clinched.

The season was to have ended on Sept. 3 but because of wet weather during the last three weeks many contests have been postponed. Unless the unexpected happens, postponed games with Wellsville and Knowles, Taylor and Knowles nines will not be played.

KOREAN PASTOR IN PULPIT HERE

Rev. Robert Chung, native of Korea, who recently graduated from Asbury College at Wilmore, Ky., will occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal church at the morning and evening preaching services next Sunday. He will also address the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Rev. Mr. Chung will return to his native country this fall to engage in missionary work.

SCHOOLS RE-OPEN FOR FALL TERM

The Chester schools re-opened for the 1926-1927 term this morning. Most of the day was given over to registration. School work will probably get underway tomorrow.

ROCK SPRINGS PARK IS CLOSED

Rock Springs Park closed the 1926 season yesterday with a fair-sized crowd in attendance.

Before the resort opens in 1927 it will present an entirely different appearance, according to C. C. Macdonald, lessee of the playground. The grounds are to be beautified, buildings to be repainted and overhauled and nearly $100,000 spent on new amusements.

Macdonald, who has taken a 25-year lease on the resort, which will be known as New Rock Springs park, will come to Chester within next month to take up his residence here and supervise the improvements. His present lease on Summit Beach park, near Akron, expires Sept. 15.

Visiting at Jackson Home.

Mrs. Eva Turner, of Tuscon, Arizona, who has been spending the summer in Kentucky, has arrived in Chester for a few days' visit with Mrs. M. E. Jackson of First street. Mrs. Turner will leave for her home Thursday evening, accompanied by Mrs. Naomi Neilson, Mrs. John Owen and Miss Essie Jackson, who plan to spend the winter in Phoenix, Arizona.

Bible Searchers' Class Meeting.

Monthly meeting of the Bible Searchers' class of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be held in the tabernacle adjoining the church at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. The class, composed of women, is taught by Floyd Hissam.

The program will be in charge of Mrs. A. E. Ehrheart. Refreshments will be served by the social committee, with Mrs. George Cook as chairman.

Austria Gives Warm Welcome to Foreign Naval Officials

VIENNA.—Although Austria ceased to be a naval power after the treaty of Trianon, the government has had four official naval visits from foreign powers this year, which would have been excessive even for the Empire.

The American Admiral Wells and staff were the first to come to Vienna from their flagship anchored near Trieste. The Turks and the French sent naval staffs to the Danube republic next and a visit of several hundred English officers will be made this month.

The English will land at Pola, formerly an Austrian naval base, and will be escorted by former Austrian admirals to Vienna.

Strange Stalactites Discovered in Famous Grotto in Paris

PARIS.—Something extraordinary in stalactities have just been discovered in the Grotto du Grand Roc at Laugerie-Basse. In form and delicacy they surpass anything yet found.

They are in the shape of crosses, dragon-flies, root forms, bouquets of coral, flutes and horns. One is exactly like a great salamander and another the reproduction of a large elephant's foot. The foundations are completely crystalline and transparent like glass with a little of the color of honey in them. There are hundreds all assembled together, amalgamated by a kind of bridge or other complicated appendices.

Such formations have been seen in Belgium and Marovia but never in such profusion and exhuberance of forms as in this grotto which was only recently discovered by pure chance. Monsieur Le Bel, a celebrated chemist, noticed, with his collaborator, the presence of innumerable small springs at the base of the great cliffs. In the spring of 1924 they succeeded in penetrating into the labyrinth and there found the amazing formations.

MACK PLAYERS AT THE STRAND

"Clean Show for All" Opens Fall Engagement.

Red Mack and his players, in the big musical comedy 'Love and Dynamite," opened the engagement at the Strand theatre yesterday. It is a "clean show for all." Red Mack the owner of the organization, does not believe in "smut." First and foremost among Red Mack's secret of success, is the theory that the public wants clean, wholesome, entertainment. No scene nor situation, song or line that is any way suggestive or vulgar, is allowed to mar the aspect of this atraction. "The public does not want anything but clean shows and that is just what they are getting," said Red Mack. "I have engaged a company of ladies and gentlemen and artists of the highest caliber and I guess the theatre-going public, will agree with me, after they have seen my show.'

UNITED STATES WITH 500,000 MILES OF IMPROVED ROADS LEADS THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.— As the only billion-dollar "highway" nation in the world, the United States now leads all the rest of the world with 500,000 miles of good roads, it was announced today at thedepartment of commerce.

With a congressional appropriation of $75,000,000 and a state and local fund of $100,000,000 being expended this year, the American people already have poured out $1,002,000,000 on good roads, of this amount the federal government alone has expended $371,701,000.

The broad sweeping network of paved highways, interlacing virtually every state in the union, government officials said, has opened a new field of transportation for American industry, sharply reduced the cost of marketing agriculture products over short distances and permitted millions of Americans "to see America first" for the first time.

"So I hailed a ride and came over here and surrendered. I could get away if I wanted to but I never done anything wrong so why should I run, I have just killed men who tried to kill me and that isn't wrong.

BOOK ONE—XI.

Jock missed the second football game of the season; he spent that afternoon in New York with Yvonne. She had telephoned him the night before, suggesting that he do this. "Really, Jock Hamill, I'm not at all in the mood to travel all the way out there tomorrow. You come here instead."

In any other girl, this calm change of plan without any sufficient reason would have enraged him. In Yvonne it was merely divertingly characteristic. Jock acceded to it with scarcely a protest.

And so they sat together on a huge black divan that faced the fireplace in Yvonne's living room. The window shades were drawn, giving an effect of twilight at 3 o'clock, and here and there about the room lamps diffused a lovely blushing glow. Yvonne leaned against a pile of cushions that Jock thought must have been chosen just to match her. A russet one, like her hair; a green one, like her tea gown; and one so precisely the hue of her gray eyes that they seemed like sample pieces of its material. She wore tiny tall-heeled slippers with French toes, and no stockings, and her legs were as delicately creamy and flawless as the skin of her neck and arms.

For an hour, while the fire blazed at their feet and their cigarettes filled the room with a thin fine mist, they talked generalities. A long dreamy hour, full of a brooding peace. Jock felt drugged with it. He felt that he wanted it never to end. . . . Firelight and Yvonne. Little quiet-leaping flames, and Yvonne's voice, like a lullaby. And Yvonne's beauty to look at, to drink up with the eyes. . . . Incredible to remember that somewhere men were playing football and other men were watching them and there was a tumult and a roar and a delirium. He smiled contentedly, thinking this. He would not have parted with this hour for any game that was ever played, or ever would be.

Generalities. Religion again, poetry, music, life and letters. Ever and anon he tried to swing the conversation around to more personal topics. Always Yvonne forestalled him.

Then, unexpectedly, she did it herself. There had been a little silence, and she said, "I have been thinking of you, Jock."

Jock answered, "I was thinking of you, too. I've been thinking of you to the exclusion of every one and everything else, since the very first instant I saw you."

Yvonne turned her head and regarded him gravely. "Yes, that's true, isn't it," she observed after a while, as though she had made quite sure it was true. "Well, what have you been thinking?"

"Mostly in interrogation-points. Wondering who you are, and—and whether or not you're married."

"I'm not married."

She said this expressionlessly, as a person might say "I'm not tired" or "I'm not hungry." But it rang in Jock's ears like a paean of happiness. It shook him from his lethargy. He felt of a sudden that he could not sit still—that he must rise and leap about and wave his arms like a madman for the sheer joy of it. "Oh, say that again!" he implored her.

Yvonne smiled at him. "Child!"

"I know—but say it!"

"I am not married."

They stared at one another for a long intense moment. Then Yvonne laid her fingers lightly across Jock's mouth. "Don't tell me what you're thinking now," she said. "Because I don't want you to tell me."

Jock seized the fingers and kissed them, and the accumulated vague emotions of the past two weeks crystallized all at once, took definite shape, came clamoring to be cried aloud that Yvonne might hear them. He knew, now. He was sure, now. "I've got to tell you," he said huskily. "I've got to—Yvonne—I love you, I love you so—"

She broke away from him and stood up, silhouetted against the mantel, gazing at him. "Do you remember the last thing I said to you when you left here the other day?" she queried.

"Of course."

"What was it?"

"You said, 'I'm sorry for you'—"

Yvonne nodded. "This is what I meant."

"You were sorry because you knew I'd fall in love with you? Yvonne—"

"Listen to me!" She had silenced him with a gesture. "Listen, because I shall probably never tell you the truth again. You'll be unhappy if you love me. You'll be miserable. Oh, I know—I know you. You told me more about yourself that day at luncheon that you realize—more, much more, than you actually said. And I've thought about you, and I understand you. You're very young, and sensitive, and you have something precious. You have ideals. Don't you—can't you see how I would hurt you? You look at me and think, 'I love that woman.' You don't know. You don't know. Why, Jock Hamill, can't you see there's nothing here? Nothing inside that you would love? That's what I'm trying to tell you. I've only beauty. Skin deep. That's a platitude, but it's true with me. I'm nothing but — what was that word you used? Glitter. That was it. I'm really nothing but glitter, Jock."

Her earnestness was lost on him. He knew only that she was wonderful and desirable and near, so near that he had but to put out his arms to hold her imprisoned. He fought down his impulse to do this, and answered her impatiently, almost angrily. "Yvonne — don't you mustn't say things like that! I love you, worship you—I'll always love you—do you think love is a thing one can drop like a toy because some one says, 'That isn't what you want?' It is what I want! It's what I know now I can't live without—loving you. Yvonne, is there any reason why I can't? Do you love some one else, so that I'm only making myself ridiculous in your eyes? Is that what you want me to know?"

"No," said Yvonne slowly. "No, I don't love anyone else."

Then Jock put out his arms and caught her to him, and a thing like a sob welled up in him so that he could not speak. He touched his hands to her hair, her glorious hair, and to the line of her cheek, and very gently, very softly, he kissed her eyelids, her throat, her mouth. . . . Ethereal kisses, not of the flesh, because he was full of a tenderness and a reverence stronger and greater than passion.

And bye and bye she held herself away, at arms' length, and her eyes seemed to bear down into the heart of him. For an age. For an eternity. And at least she shrugged and said, "So be it. But I told you the truth. And sometime, when you learn that it was the truth, I want you to remember that I told you—once—my dear."

Q. Has a man ever driven an airplane at a speed of 250 miles an hour? J. D.

A. The maximum airplane speed record is held by France by a man named Bonnett, made December 11, 1924, straightaway record of 278.480 miles per hour. Lieut. Bettis of the Army Air Service holds the record for the 100 kilometer course of 249.342 miles per hour.

Strained honey is that which has been extracted from the combs, strained, and put up in bottles or cans. It forms about nine-tenths of all the honey sold. Candied honey is the honey that has been allowed to crystallize into a kind of sugar.

The Legion In France

There has been some talk of the American Legion, which has planned to hold its 1927 convention in France, taking it somewhere else because of French demonstrations lately against Americans.

The evidences of unfriendliness and hostility reported from France naturally suggest such a change. Many Americans feel that it would be unwise for our service men to go there en masse when such feeling prevails, because it might be embarrasing on both sides and might even lead to violent conflict.

The two big French soldier organizations, however, deprecate any such action, insisting that the hostile demonstrations against Americans have been exaggerated, that they will all be glad to see their American "buddies" and that nothing but courtesy and friendliness need be expected.

This is probably true. However the French civilians may feel, the French soldiers doubtless realize what the American troops did for France, and it is hardly likely their visit would be made unpleasant. The whole French attitude, too, may be changed a year from now.

The American veterans are doubtless right in their decision to carry out the arrangements made and proceed to France when the time comes, just as if nothing had happened. The less formal attention is paid to international unpleasantnesses, the sooner they disappear. America and France will yet be good friends again. Look at the bitterness there was between America and Germany a few years ago, with far greater reason—and now!

Little Olive Branches

Delegates to the International Democratic Congress, meeting in France, say that "children in school hold in their hands the hope of world peace."

Twenty-three nations are represented in that congress. Much may be accomplished, the leaders say, through the exchange of letters by children representing all those nations, by the plan used already by thousands of American and French children.

It makes a good starter, at least. It is good for children to correspond with children of other countries, widening their viewpoint and teaching them that the boys and girls of other races are very much like them, with only enough difference to make them interesting. Youngsters and grown-ups of all races need to learn that.

There was hope, for a little while, that world peace might come in this generation, after the great sacrifice of the World war. The hope has vanished from most minds. The task was too great.

The hope of peace is in the future and therefore in the children. If they are taught wisely, then their generation, when it comes to maturity and power—or the next generation, or the next after that—may accomplish what the world wants.

Credit Losses

The American Institution of Accountants is studying credit conditions, trying to avoid some of the credit losses. It may well do so. The credit criminal collects $250,000,000 annually from American business. Fake bankrupts take a huge toll. People who charge a lot of stuff and then move out of town are another drain.

The ordinary person who works hard and honestly, but lives close to the line and has a difficult time paying his bills in case of illness or any emergency, finds it almost impossible to understand how the clever credit rascals get away with their loot.

This story is told in one city's building circles:

A man estalished credit by conducting three or four building operations according to the conventional rules of the game. Then he found an opportunity to buy seven lots with a small down payment. He got large construction loans and started in building all seven houses at once. Usually a builder starts one or two, then moves masons on to another while the carpenters proceed with the first, and so on, keeping all the kinds of workmen busy. Being honest themselves, the supply men merely thought his method queer and suspected no evil.

After a month of frenzied work with much overtime, he collected a large part of his loan on the basis of work finished. He then stopped work and skipped. Supply men are holding the bag. He has the money and they have bill receivable and that's all. The bank cannot collect unless it finishes the houses and sells them.

Lawyers say the builder committed no legal crime. If he ever comes back, he can be sued. But "it is not a crime to owe money."

This is an ingenious, unusual and extreme case, but it illustrates the point.

You can't always tell what's in a name, but anyway Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya (bless him for that "T.") was keynoter at the opening of the Toronto Exposition, and is said to have cast a spell over his audience.

There seems to be some question as to which are more help to a lady swimmer—tugs or children.

Maybe the grease they complain of on the Atlantic coast is washed over from the channel swimmers.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Fifth avenue and Broadway are a parade ground for an almost constant procession of the oddly dressed. Some are seekers of publicity and others are merely harmless and often half-cracked.

Mumbling Moe has for many years roamed the avenue curbs salvaging pins from the gutters. He has a straggly beard and in all seasons wears a half dozen overcoats, the outer one of which is decorated with the products of his search.

The gray derbied twins are crisp, elderly gentlemen—alike as two peas—who usually emerge from Central Park in the late afternoon and stroll as far south as the Waldorf. They have a Brummelish flair, austere dignity and are apparently oblivious of pedestrianic gazing.

Lower Fifth avenue offers two women in black who promenade at dusk. They walk on opposite sides of the street and apparently try to keep in step. They are doubtless slightly mad. When they reach a certain corner they exchange signals and scuttle out side streets.

In Times Square almost daily appears a former pugilist, also mildly touched, who shadow boxes with an imaginary foe on the sidewalk and when a crowd collects sings a song and vanishes. Police do not bother him. If the crowd grows too big they merely wave him away. He is a drug addict.

In the same district is a hatless man who carries an alpenstock and now and then stops to yodel. Also a man who wears a green derby and white spats and passes out little printed cards with the meaningless twaddle: "Life is logical but mediocre."

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

A cafe near the Coentes Slip offers fried seagull's eggs. And a Chinese place on Broadway has jellied bear meat.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south-bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction. An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE CANDIDATE.

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

Her Tragic Mistake

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

"The house was large and lonely. I was frightened. Terry had called, and I had just answered, when there came a terrific crash, and—"

Finds True Story A Great Help

Dear Sir:

Being a minister of the Gospel, I find True Story a help in warning young people against the trials and temptations of life. If more mothers would provide this magazine for their girls to read we ministers would hear less of the sad stories of fallen girls. May God bless you in your work of helping the young by warning them of the dangers in life. If this is worth anything to you in carrying on the work, I give you permission to use this in any way you see fit. Best wishes for your continued success.

The Legion In France

There has been some talk of the American Legion, which has planned to hold its 1927 convention in France, taking it somewhere else because of French demonstrations lately against Americans.

The evidences of unfriendliness and hostility reported from France naturally suggest such a change. Many Americans feel that it would be unwise for our service men to go there en masse when such feeling prevails, because it might be embarrasing on both sides and might even lead to violent conflict.

The two big French soldier organizations, however, deprecate any such action, insisting that the hostile demonstrations against Americans have been exaggerated, that they will all be glad to see their American "buddies" and that nothing but courtesy and friendliness need be expected.

This is probably true. However the French civilians may feel, the French soldiers doubtless realize what the American troops did for France, and it is hardly likely their visit would be made unpleasant. The whole French attitude, too, may be changed a year from now.

The American veterans are doubtless right in their decision to carry out the arrangements made and proceed to France when the time comes, just as if nothing had happened. The less formal attention is paid to international unpleasantnesses, the sooner they disappear. America and France will yet be good friends again. Look at the bitterness there was between America and Germany a few years ago, with far greater reason—and now!

Little Olive Branches

Delegates to the International Democratic Congress, meeting in France, say that "children in school hold in their hands the hope of world peace."

Twenty-three nations are represented in that congress. Much may be accomplished, the leaders say, through the exchange of letters by children representing all those nations, by the plan used already by thousands of American and French children.

It makes a good starter, at least. It is good for children to correspond with children of other countries, widening their viewpoint and teaching them that the boys and girls of other races are very much like them, with only enough difference to make them interesting. Youngsters and grown-ups of all races need to learn that.

There was hope, for a little while, that world peace might come in this generation, after the great sacrifice of the World war. The hope has vanished from most minds. The task was too great.

The hope of peace is in the future and therefore in the children. If they are taught wisely, then their generation, when it comes to maturity and power—or the next generation, or the next after that—may accomplish what the world wants.

Credit Losses

The American Institution of Accountants is studying credit conditions, trying to avoid some of the credit losses. It may well do so. The credit criminal collects $250,000,000 annually from American business. Fake bankrupts take a huge toll. People who charge a lot of stuff and then move out of town are another drain.

The ordinary person who works hard and honestly, but lives close to the line and has a difficult time paying his bills in case of illness or any emergency, finds it almost impossible to understand how the clever credit rascals get away with their loot.

This story is told in one city's building circles:

A man estalished credit by conducting three or four building operations according to the conventional rules of the game. Then he found an opportunity to buy seven lots with a small down payment. He got large construction loans and started in building all seven houses at once. Usually a builder starts one or two, then moves masons on to another while the carpenters proceed with the first, and so on, keeping all the kinds of workmen busy. Being honest themselves, the supply men merely thought his method queer and suspected no evil.

After a month of frenzied work with much overtime, he collected a large part of his loan on the basis of work finished. He then stopped work and skipped. Supply men are holding the bag. He has the money and they have bill receivable and that's all. The bank cannot collect unless it finishes the houses and sells them.

Lawyers say the builder committed no legal crime. If he ever comes back, he can be sued. But "it is not a crime to owe money."

This is an ingenious, unusual and extreme case, but it illustrates the point.

You can't always tell what's in a name, but anyway Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya (bless him for that "T."(was keynoter at the opening of the Toronto Exposition, and is said to have cast a spell over his audience.

There seems to be some question as to which are more help to a lady swimmer—tugs or children.

Maybe the grease they complain of on the Atlantic coast is washed over from the channel swimmers.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Fifth avenue and Broadway are a parade ground for an almost constant procession of the oddly dressed. Some are seekers of publicity and others are merely harmless and often half-cracked.

Mumbling Moe has for many years roamed the avenue curbs salvaging pins from the gutters. He has a straggly beard and in all seasons wears a half dozen overcoats, the outer one of which is decorated with the products of his search.

The gray derbied twins are crisp, elderly gentlemen—alike as two peas—who usually emerge from Central Park in the late afternoon and stroll as far south as the Waldorf. They have a Brummelish flair, austere dignity and are apparently oblivious of pedestrianic gazing.

Lower Fifth avenue offers two women in black who promenade at dusk. They walk on opposite sides of the street and apparently try to keep in step. They are doubtless slightly mad. When they reach a certain corner they exchange signals and scuttle out side streets.

In Times Square almost daily appears a former pugilist, also mildly touched, who shadow boxes with an imaginary foe on the sidewalk and when a crowd collects sings a song and vanishes. Police do not bother him. If the crowd grows too big they merely wave him away. He is a drug addict.

In the same district is a hatless man who carries an alpenstock and now and then stops to yodel. Also a man who wears a green derby and white spats and passes out little printed cards with the meaningless twaddle: "Life is logical but mediocre."

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

A cafe near the Coentes Slip offers fried seagull's eggs. And a Chinese place on Broadway has jellied bear meat.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south-bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction. An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE CANDIDATE.

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

Her Tragic Mistake

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

POLICE RAID EIGHT PLACES

Frank Fusci and Bernard Taylor Held for Hearings.

Two arrests on possession charges and three for intoxication represent activities of local police during the week-end and Monday holiday.

Frank Fusci, charged with possession, was arrested at his place near Fourteenth and Main streets by Chief Fultz and Patrolman Pugh Saturday night. He is slated for a hearing this evening.

Bernard Taylor, arrested in Twelfth street by Fultz and Pugh on a similar charge, will face Mayor W. L. Fogo Thursday night, according to present arrangements. Beer seized by police in the raid will be analyzed by City Chemist Jess Tarr.

William Hanna, Charles Thompson and Harve Sheckler were picked up by Patrolman Pugh and Cole on charges of intoxication. Hanna was ordered to leave town.

Police raided eight places Saturday on liquor warrents and made arrests at two places—Fusci's and Taylor's. Two other places in Main street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, were notified to close up by Chief Fultz, who threatens to "padlock" the places if the orders are not complied with.

Owners of the property have also been notified of the police action.

CELLARS FILLED BY RAIN STORM

The work and labor of almost two weeks, spent by the service department in erasing the marks of the rain storm that broke through McQueen's Run sewer, was practically wiped away Saturday night when a near deluge again partially inundated the west end of the city between Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets.

A several hours' terrific downpour covered the Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car and other traffic as the water backed up Commerce to as far as Fourteenth street.

Cellars of several scores of homes in the district were flooded.

Mayor W. L. Fogo and city employes were on the job early Sunday morning following the rain and succeeded in draining the water away.

The mud coating on the several streets which were inundated will be removed this week.

WOMAN SHERIFF JAILS MAN WHO KILLED SEVEN

Arkansas Slayer Gets Thrill by Surrendering.

NEVER CAPTURED

"Never Did Any Low-down Thing Like Stealing."

TEXARKANA, Ark.—"I just wanted a new thrill. So I surrendered to a woman sheriff."

Bennie Wagner, 23, slayer of seven men, in his cell at the local jail told why he gave himself up to Sheriff (Mrs.) Lillie Barber after killing a couple of men here a few days ago.

Thrills are scarce to a killer kid who kills a man every two months for a year. It is much more a novelty to surrender to a woman sheriff than to kill a couple of men. So Bennie will tell you.

"I can say one thing truthfully," said Bennie, "I have never been captured." "I have never done any low-down things either, like stealing."

"I started from my home over in Gates City, Va., about two years ago with a circus. I quit the show down in Mississippi.

"I was framed, and arrested for stealing a watch. I never stole anything in my life and told the sheriff so. But he kept laughing at me and telling me how many years I was going to get."

"I told the sheriff I would run over him and escape. He laughed again. So I did. A deputy sheriff grabbed a shotgun and pointed it at me. I took the sheriff's pistol and killed the deputy."

"I had learned trick shooting from the circus and can shoot objects in the air as fast as you can toss them up. I never miss."

"I went back home and waited for things to quiet down. One day I went over in Tennessee and two men deliberately started shooting at me. So I kelled 'em both. I beat it and later learned they were officers and knew who I was."

"An old woman friend of my family persuaded me to surrender and several days later I did."

"I was tried and sentenced to the electric chair. My lawyer asked for a new trial and got it."

"I got tired of being in jail so I just broke out. Two guards were shooting at me. I turned around and killed one of them and started running. I shot the other one over my left shoulder while running. He was killed, too.

"I went to Texas and rambled around a bit. Later I came here and started working on a farm. The other day the Carper boys started to beat me up with a single tree. I was their friend and told them not to hit me again. They laughed and kept beating me."

"So I took my pistol and killed 'em. I would have killed that other fellow I shot but it was too dark to see and aim straight. I would never have been caught. Two days later I heard there was a woman sheriff here trying to make good in her husband's place. Her husband was killed, awhile back, I heard."

This, in brief, is what a desperate gunman, slayer of seven, has to say and he wasn't disappointed with the thrill he expected in surrendering to a woman.

A standard motor fuel for France is being proposed.

MEXICAN DIVORCE "PARADISE" SOLVES PALMER-BREWSTER ROMANCE ISSUE

Corliss Palmer, whose beauty won for her a prize from one of the magazines published by Eugene V. Brewster, is to be married to the wealthy publisher on or about Thanksgiving. For six years Miss Palmer and Brewster have been "engaged" but Mrs. Eleanor Brewster has prevented a divorce action which would make their marriage possible. Now Brewster has found a Mexican city where divorces are granted "without grounds." Immediately after the divorce is obtained, beauty and publisher will be wed. Large photo is of Corliss Palmer, insets of Brewster and Mrs. Brewster.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

TYPHOID FEVER EPIDEMIC HITS WELLINGTON, O.

Council Acts as Known Cases Increase to to 60.

TWO PERSONS DIE

Emergency Ordinance Calls for Pasteurization of Milk.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 7.—Two representatives of the state health department left here today for Wellington, Ohio, and Marion and Fulton counties, where many cases of typhoid fever have developed. Dr. T. W. Mahoney was sent to Wellington where 52 have been reported. Dr. R. B. Tate went to Fulton and Marion counties where at least a dozen scattered cases have developed, according to Dr. C. P. Robbins.

Dr. Robbins expressed concern over the situation in Wellington and declared it may be 10 days before the source of the disease is reached. He declared it has been spread along a milkman's route. The milk distributor gathers milk and cream from five farmers, he said.

WELLINGTON, O., Sept. 7.—With another death, the second within a week, and the increase of known cases to 60, the city council today ordered emergency regulations in an effort to curb the ravages of the typhoid fever epidemic which began two weeks ago.

Mrs. Frances Kimmerling, 26, died of the disease Sunday and former Mayor Guy Wells, is reported in a serious condition. His wife and son became afflicted with the fever several days ago.

& Emergency ordinances passed by the council, provided that all milk must be pasteurized but as only one plant is equipped with the sanitary system other dairies have been allowed two days to install machinery. The plant now pasteurizing milk cannot furnish an adequate supply for the city.

Although the number of patients suffering from the disease had doubled within the last week, local health authorities hope that the epidemic has been checked, although they expect additional cases to be reported for another day or two.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—After a firm opening, in which the railroad, equipment, oils and a few of the utility stocks registered moderate gains, the stock market developed an irregular trend in early trading today. Heavy offerings of the market leaders made it impossible for them to make further upward progress, and in many cases they fell back to below the level of last Friday's closing prices.

There was no indication that bullish interests in the railroad stocks would continue the broad advance in prices, though New York Central was well bought above 147.

The rise in oil stocks, which carried the leading independent oils to fractionally higher prices, was based on the report of declining production in California and Texas, and the firm market for oil products. Atlantic Refining was a leader in this group, with Marland, Phillips, Pan American and Sinclair responding promptly to more aggressive buying.

Weather Prophet Correct on Crops

S. Department of Agriculture issues a statement to a large extent bearing out Mr. Browne's forecast.

Issues in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—Prohibition and the world court were the out standing issues before voters as they marched to the polls in the Wisconsin primary election today.

The contest that holds the center of interest is between Senator Irvine L. Lenroot and Gov. John J. Blaine for the Republican senatorial nomination.

For the past half dozen years the LaFollette faction has been out "to get" Lenroot. Gov. Blaine is leader of that faction. It is the consensus among political seers that the Blaine-Lenroot contest will be close, with the outtcome unknown until all votes are counted.

Blaine is said in some quarters to have the edge over Lenroot because of the efficiency of his well-oiled state machine. Wisconsin is anti-world court and wet, according to all surface indications.

Lenroot is a sponsor of the world court. He has strong women's organizations over the state working for him. Their support is expected to counteract much of the influence of the well organized Blaine machine.

A vote in excess of 400,000 is predicted today on the basis of favorable weather.

Heavy Voting in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 7.—Heavy voting marked progress today in the primary election in New Hampshire.

In the race for the United States senate, three Republicans were running. Senator George H. Moses was opposed by former Governor Robert B. Bass and Judge James W. Remick.

Huntley N. Spaulding was opposing Governor John G. Winant in the Republican gubernatorial contest.

In the Democratic primary, Robert C. Murchie, Concord, in the fight for the United States senatorial nomination was opposed by Albert W. Noone, Peterboro.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Mayor Eaton D. Sargent, Nashua, was unopposed.

F. Clyde Keefe, of Dover, opposed Ferdinand Farley, of Manchester, for the Democratic nomination in the first congressional district and Congressman Fletcher Hale was unopposed in the Republican primary in that district.

There were no contests in the second congressional district. Congressman Edward H. Wason ran alone on the Republican side and George H. Duncan, of New Jersey, on the Democratic side.

BELLAIRE POLICE CHIEF ON TRIAL

BELLAIRE, O., Sept. 7.—Chief of Police Clarence E. Corbett, went on trial before the civil service commission here today, facing six charges which included drunkenness and discourtesy, preferred by Mayor Floyd Conwell.

IRISH VILLAGE MOVIE HOUSE FIRE TOLL 51

Drumcolliher, County of Limerick, Vale of Tears.

10 ARE MISSING

Owner and Operator of Picture Machine are Detained.

DRUMCOLLIHER, Ireland, Sept. 7.—Deadly silence prevails in this stricken village, broken only by the tramp of feet, sobs and an occasional hysterical shriek as attempts are made to identify the dead of the disastrous fire in the improvised picture theatre here.

The charred remains of 48 bodies lie in coffins in houses and stores and all day a continual procession of relatives and friends filed before these bodies striving to identify them from rosaries or trinkets which were found upon them.

Thus far only six of the 48 bodies have been identified.

Priests are conducting a census of the village and its environs striving to determine definitely who is among the dead.

Propose Communal Grave.

President Cosgrove arrived here today from Dublin and immediately went to the tiny village church where he heard a requiem mass for the victims of the disaster.

Evidence brought out at the coroner's inquest disclosed the absence of precautionary measures in connection with the establishment of the improvised motion picture theatre.

Ford, the owner of the theatre, and Dowling, the motion picture operator, were held in custody during a week's adjournment of the inquest.

Numerous children who are motherless due to the disaster, continue to roam the streets of the village weeping and praying and refusing to be consoled.

LIMERICK, Sept. 7.—The little village of Drumcolliher, county of Limerick, was a vale of tears today.

Hardly a soul in the town but numbers one of more among the 51 men, women and children who perished when fire swept through a loft where a moving picture entertainment was being held.

Practically the entire populace was occupied this morning in seeking to identify their loved ones among the bodies, or in making preparations for their burial. Some of the victims are so badly burned as to defy identification. These, it is understood, will all be buried together.

Between 15 and 20 children are among the dead, and it is reported 10 persons are still unaccounted for, so that the death toll may reach 60.

Drumcolliher's one street was thronged with weeping men and women. All ploces of business were closed. Relief workers from Limerick, Cork and Dublin were endeavoring to provide for families of the victims. Physicians were working to save the lives of the injured, many of whom are in a critical condition from burns and gas fumes.

Intense public feeling was directed against a man named Ford, owner of the moving picture machine, the faulty operation of which led to the fire.

Ford's house was stoned last night and all the windows broken. Local police placed Ford under arrest for his own safety and pending an oficial inquiry into the cause of the disaster. The operator of the machine, Downey, is also being detained.

LIQUOR BLAMED FOR TRAGEDY

Ohio Farmer Kills Child and Wounds Wife.

BATAVIA, O., Sept. 7.—The ghost of another family tragedy stalked the hills of Clermont county today. It was the fourth of the summer.

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 7.—Facing a first degree murder charge, Mrs. Mabel Graham, 27, formerly of this city, but for the past two years living in Canton, O., sat in the Brooke county jail here today. She was alleged to have shot her husband, Albert, 33, as they rode in an automobile on the Bethany pike, near here.

The young woman denied firing the shot with intent to kill her husband, saying she intended to commit suicide, because he refused to go back to Canton with her, and that the gun was accidentally discharged when the automobile went into a ditch.

Graham left Canton Monday morning, according to his widow, and came here to look for work, she followed in the afternoon and they met at a tourists' camp, near town. She got into the automobile with him and they drove away. She admitted to Prosecutor Wilkins they quarreled and that she produced the gun. In trying to prevent her from ending her life, her husband lost control of the car, she said. As it plunged into a ditch, the gun was fired and Graham was instantly killed.

H. M. DAUGHERTY GOES ON TRIAL IN NEW YORK

Former Cabinet Member is Charged With Accepting Bribe.

MILLER ACCUSED

Two Others Indicted in American Metals Case are Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—For the first time in history a former member of a presidential cabinet goes on trial today. He is Harry M. Daughetry, attorney general of the United States in the Harding administration. He is charged with accepting a bribe of $441,000.

On trial with Daugherty will be Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian in the same administration. He also is charged with receiving a bribe.

These two, with two others, are accused of accepting $50,000 in cash and $391,000 in Liberty bonds for returning to German owners of the American Metals company $6,453,979, realized from sale of the stock of the company after it had been seized in the war.

The two indicted with Daugherty and Miller are dead. One was John T. King, Republican dictator of Bridgeport., Conn., and the other was Jess W. Smith, Daughterty's shadow and apartment mate.

Smith killed himself in 1923.

Trial Before Federal Jury.

After many legal battles to keep the case from trial, it opens before Judge Julian W. Mack and a jury in federal court here today. It is tried in New York because, it is alleged, the bribe was paid here on October 1, 1921. It is expected that the first day will be consumed in selecting a jury.

The indictment alleges that Daugherty and Miller turned the $6,453,979 over to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs De Metaux without investigating the validity of that firm's claims to the funds.

The American Metals company, owned by Germans, was impounded during the war by A. Michell Palmer, alien property custodian. Its stock was sold and the proceeds were deposited in the treasury.

Immediately after the Harding administration came in Daugherty and Miller were appointed to their offices. Six months later, it is said, they accepted the bribe.

According to the indictment, Richard Merton, one of the orginal German owners, paid the $411,000 to the government officials for their services in restoring the property to alien hands.

TURKEY SEEKS LEAGUE SEAT

Spectre of Soviet Russia Also Looms at Geneva.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—With Turkey knocking at the door of the League of Nations, the spectre of soviet Russia is looming once more at Geneva.

Through Munir Bey, its representative at Berne, Turkey has indicated at several capitals its desire to join the league provided it receives assurance of a seat in the council.

Great Britain, through diplomatic channels, has informed Turkey that an essential preliminary condition to her acceptance by the league is the revision of the Russo-Turkish treaty, particularly the neutrality clause which provides that Turkey remain neutral if Russia becomes involved in war, even though Russia be the aggressor, and vice-versa.

Great Britain contends that this clause violates the league covenant, inasmuch as if Russia should attack a member of the league, Turkey, as all other members, would be obligated to take measures against Russia.

Officials Seek Mazer

today with the return of United States Attorney A. E. Bernsteen from his vacation.

The first move will be the recommendation to the United States attorney general that Louis Mazer, one of the three named in the murder indictment be returned to Canton for arraignment.

This recommendation will be made, Bernsteen said, in view of the fact that Mazer is held here on a liquor conspiracy charge brought by federal authorities, and proper procedure specified that he be released to Stark county authorities by order of the United States attorney general only.

It was learned that a deputy sheriff from Canton was en route to Bernsteen's office to arrange for Mazer's release to Stark county authorities.

Although he will not be permitted to return with Mazer today, Stark county authorities will be duly notified when the release is issued by the attorney general, Bernsteen said.

Plan to Grill Mazer.

The second step will be the grilling of Mazer today by Bernsteen in an effort to break through Mazer's hitherto impenetrable reserve regarding the murder and his reiterations of innocence.

Further evidence in the slaying and those connected with it, which has so far not been revealed is expected to be secured by Bernsteen through the squad of federal dry and narcotic operatives thrown into the field by him, and given orders to delve into vice conditions as they exist in Canton.

A round-up of federal law violators is expected by the end of the week, it was learned from an official source.

Statements taken from those arrested will probably bring to light evidence regarding the identity of the trigger-man in the murder, "together with the evidence about the higher-ups," which has not been revealed heretofore, the fighting district attorney said.

A detailed report of operations of federal agents in Canton and vicinity together with his own deductions concerning the Mellett murder was being prepared today by Howell Leuck, assistant United States district attorney who was placed in charge of the federal probe by Bernsteen.

Clean Up Looms.

"There will be some pretty big boys enmeshed in our net when we get through investigating the wholesale rum ring down there," Leuck said.

"We have the dope on them and no matter what they do or how they squirm they won't wriggle off our hook," he added.

Joseph R. Roach, vice fighting Chicago attorney who handled the investigation of the Mellett murder, and is now in Chicago, is expected to confer with Bernsteen about Sept. 16, when he will lay evidence regarding the criminal activities of the "higher-ups" which may result in the federal grand jury returning indictments.

vised coal fires were used as the people breakfasted.

The city went without fuel until 10:30 o'clock last night when a temporary line was laid by the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co., furnishing gas from the Steubenville end.

One of the breaks occured under stress of a slip in the west end of Wellsville and the other, of undetermined cause, occurred in the east end of the city, in the river. A gas company diver arrived here today and will go after the leak as soon as the current in the river abates.

Veritable torrents of water poured over the East Liverpool-Wellsville road during the heaviest storm. The highway bore every resemblance of a millrace, water running curb deep from Walker's to Brady's cut.

Rocks On Roadway.

At the top of Brady's cut, a gushing waterfall overlooking the hillside poured water, rocks and dirt into the roadway. Water from the embankment above the road at Walker's ran westwardly in the road. The streams overflowed at the lowest point, at the foot of Brady's cut, and swept over on to the street car tracks, washing out a huge section of the eastbound rails.

One-way traffic was in order Sunday as loads of earth were conveyed to the spot for a fill.

State highway department men and trucks from Lisbon put the highway in shape for traffic again Sunday.

PLAN TO BEGIN WORK AT NEW ROCK SPRINGS

Old Scenic Railway Will be Torn Down.

PLANT NEW LAWN

Weiner Roasts, Barbecues on Fall-Winter Program.

With passing of Labor Day improvements will be started in Rock Springs park at once by the new manager and lessee, C. C. MacDonald, it was announced today.

New Rock Springs, as the renovated park is to be called, is to be completely changed, improved and put into shape with new lawns taking the place of the present tangled undergrowth; new settings of trees; landscape gardening; enlarged picnic facilities; new rides and amusements—all are part of the improvement program that is to be begun at once.

The old scenic railway is to be torn down and the lumber used for erection of other smaller buildings in the park. After the whole place has been put in good shape, according to Manager MacDonald, the entire group of buildings will be given several coats of paint.

Buildings are to be re-roofed in a Miami-striped combination and boardwalks are to be constructed along the shores of the lagoon.

"When the spring of 1927 rolls around," declared MacDonald, "the name New Rock Springs park will certainly be deserved, because there will be so many changes that the place will be entirely new."

During the fall and winter the public will be invited to inspect the progress of the new features and changes being made and added. Weiner roasts, bonfire parties and barbecues will be a part of the fall and winter seasons' program.

Several changes have already been made by the group of workmen who have been on the job since MacDonald took over the park early in August.

CUT $100,000 IN PHONE COST

Bell Company Cites Saving Under New Rates.

Ohio telephone subscribers will save approximately $100,000 per year in the proposed reduction in long distance telephone charges which will become effective Oct. 1, Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the local exchange, announced today.

The reduction in the country will mean a saving of about $3,000,000, telephone company officials claim. The new rates apply to points 88 miles distant and outside of Ohio.

The principal changes are:

No change on calls to points up to 88 miles; from 88 miles to 90 miles rates reduced 5 ments; 90 to 96 miles rates as at present; 96 to 100 miles rates reduced 5 cents; 100 to 110 miles rates same as at present; 110 to 112 miles rates increased 5 cents; 112 to 128 miles rates same as at present; on calls to points beyond 128 miles the only changes are reductions.

New evening rates providing for a reduction of 25 per cent on all station-to-station calls between 7 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. which are now at full rates.

New night rates on all station-to-station calls between 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m., providing for a reduction of 50 per cent. At present the reduction between 8:30 p. m. and midnight is 50 percent and from midnight to 4:30 a. m. is 75 per cent.

Extending the reversal privilege which now applies only on person-to-person calls to station-to-station calls, making it possible to reverse charges on calls on which evening and night discounts apply.

WHY DENY YOURSELF THE BEST IN MOTOR CAR BODIES

The finest of the new cars in all price classes have now been announced—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

All offer vastly greater values than ever before in motor car history.

All register amazing advantages in performance and ease and economy of operation.

But the greatest factor of their new glory is described in a single phrase—Body by Fisher.

Here is their supreme beauty—setting absolutely new standards in charm of design and interior fitting.

Here are unequalled factors of safety which add so much to your comfort and confidence.

Here are exclusive conveniences and niceties which do, indeed, make the car with Body by Fisher superior in its class.

No matter what mechanical developments may allure you, it is the body of your car with which you live most intimately—that is why the General Motors units, makers of the best of the new cars in all price classes, point so proudly to the emblem—Body by Fisher.

With the finest of the market to choose from there is no reason why you should deny yourself the greater safety, beauty and comfort which only a Body by Fisher can give.

JONES FACES BATTLE OF LIFE TO RETAIN AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

BOBBY JONES

THE National Amateur golf title for 1926 stands between Bobby Jones and a monopoly on the major titles in reach of an amateur player.

Victory in that event, to be staged at Baltusrol, Sept. 13, will give the Atlanta marvel—

The British Open Championship.

The American Open Championship for the second time in four years.

The National Amateur Championship for the third year in succession.

Because of this wonderful playing in the tourneys todate, Jones goes into this, his last major struggle of the summer, a long favorite. But there is a grand and glorious field of simon pures waiting to down Bobby the Valiant. Not because they want to see his hopes for a clean sweep dashed, but because they have the natural ambition of any golfer, to annex one of the coveted titles. And hasn't Bobby won enough for a while?

If there lurks within the ranks of the rival amateurs entered in the tourney one who has an outstanding chance to turn back the Georgian my choice would be George Von Elm.

For two reasons.

First, Von Elm has been "coming up" for the last two years. He was one of the leading "youngsters" before the present season.

Second, he proved his readiness to step into a big title by fighting it out with Bobby Jones in the British open. He and Al Watrous, professional, ranked next to the Atlanta youth in that tourney.

But Von Elm will have plenty of competition for the honor of beating Bobby. No less a personage than Watts Gunn, protege friend and fellow townsman of Jones, is entered. Gunn is remembered as the untried youth who forced Jones to the limit in the semi-final of the open a year ago.

Then there are Roland MacKenzie and those old campaigners, Chic Evans, Bob Gardner, Jess Guilford and Francis Ouimet.

But probably of more interest than the recitation of the names of these popular stars is the list of newcomers entered.

Lester Bolstad. Heard of him? Well he's the lad who won the national public links title recently. Carl F. Kaufman? He's the lad who fought it out with Bolstad for the title.

Hamilton Gardner II and Henry W. Comstock? Two Buffalo youths and both performing brilliantly in sectional and public links affairs this season.

Paul Haviland? He's the brilliant young star who was defeated by Freddy Lamprecht in the national intercollegiate tourney. That Lamprecht himself is unable to play is regretted.

Winthrop A. Hersey, Wellesley, Mass.? Star who has won his spurs in the intercollegiate ranks.

And there are others.

The absence of Jess Sweetser from the tourney will be noted of course. Sweetser was stricken ill after his brilliant play in the British amateur tourney, which he won. He has remained out of competition of recent weeks to safeguard his health.

League Clubs Clean Up Postponed Games

Holiday Games Fail To Alter Big Races

Positions Unchanged as Result of Epidemic of "Mexican Standoffs."

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The positions of the pennant contenders in both leagues were unchanged this morning as a result of an epidemic of Mexican stand-offs in the holiday double-headers, the Cardinals, still one game ahead of the Reds in the National league race, clash with the faltering Pirates again today, while the Reds take on the Cubs.

As the Yankees and Indians both split double-headers, New York's lead is still six games. The even break was to New York's advantage, however, as both teams now have only 20 games to play. Washington took third place away from the Athletics, but the Senators trail Cleveland by four games.

SERIES RIVALS STAGE 0-0 TIE

Game Called in Sixth on Account of Darkness.

With both hurlers bearing down and neither team able to reach the plate, the third game of the Midland-East Liverpool All-Star series for the inter-city title Saturday at Midland ended in the sixth frame when darkness made it impossible to continue hostilities.

Up until that point the East Liverpool contingents had nicked Church, Midland moundsman, for only two safeties, and Bennett had allowed the Pennsylvanians five, all scattered and none damaging.

The series will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at Smith field. East Liverpool has won the two games played thus far and needs only another to make it unanimous.

RESERVES DROP TWO TO DRUGS

Bulger Nine Cops Both Ends of Double Header.

Bulger Drugs cracked the Chester Reserves' winning streak yesterday afternoon at Smith field by taking both ends of a double-header, 4 to 2, and 3 to 2.

In the inaugural inning of the first game, after White had been retired, Ferguson doubled, advanced on Horwell's sacrifice and scored on Smith's single to left.

In Chester's half, Maley was safe on White's error. He was sacrificed to second by Hannah and scored on W. Bennett's single over second. The latter stole second and scored on Kirkwood's single over short.

The Drugs tied the score in the second when Doc. Kinsey singled and went to second when John got a walk. He scored on Green's single to center. The Drugs went into the lead in the fifth when White singled to left. Ferguson flew to short and Horwell struck out. Smith stole second, White going to third, and both scored when L. Reese dropped a hard hit Texas leaguer between first and second. Kinsey fanned nine Reserves during the game.

Schneidmiller gave the Reserves five scattered hits in the second clash and fanned five.

TAGGING ALL --BASES--

After bowing to Flint Rhem in the morning contest, 8 to 1, the Pirates rallied behind Ray Kremer's pitching and downed the Cardinals, 4 to 2. Cuyler drove in the winning runs in the matinee.

Although held to two hits, the Cubs took advantage of Cincinnati's four errors and hung up a 2 to 0 victory. The Reds broke out in base hits in the second game, however, and won easily, 7 to 4. Cincinnati's pennant prospects suffered a severe blow when Pitcher Jakie May was spiked and laid up for the season.

Cy Williams pickled two homers as the Phillies broke even with Brooklyn. Vance beat the Phils in the opener, 8 to 6, but the Quakers pounded out an 8 to 2 victory in the second game.

Washington made it ten straight by slamming the Red Sox for a two to one setback, General Crowder holding the Sox to two hits. The Senators took third place away from the A's by the fraction of a point.

The White Sox got back to the .500 mark by taking both ends of a double-header from the Tigers, 5 to 4 and 7 to 3.

Chester-Turk Nash Are Billed Tonight

No Date Set for "Baby World's Series" Pending Outcome of Contests in Which Leading Pennant Rivals Will Figure.

CITY Industrial Baseball League clubs this week start their post-season cleanup of postponed contests

With the scheduled season at an end, clubs of the circuit will be compelled to play off a number of games laid over from various dates along the second half route in order to determine chances for the "Baby's world's series."

No date has been set for the series, in which Newell Laughlin nine will be one of the contenders as a result of its victory in the first half, until several of these postponed contests are out of the way, enabling league officials to act definitely.

Chester and Turk-Nash are the second half pennant possibilities, with odds favoring the West Virginians because of their three and one-half game lead at the present time.

The two rivals are slated to duel this evening at Smith Field in a postponed game, beginning at 5:30 o'clock.

Riley's club, which won the league championship last year in the series with Newell, has four contests ahead and Turk-Nash has seven, according to league officials, and practically all of the other teams have at least two or three apiece.

It is not likely that the complete schedule of postponed games, where teams down in the standing are billed against each other, will be played, in view of the fact that they would have nothing to do with determining the pennant fight.

LOCAL DRIVERS WIN AT CADIZ

Two Cars Finish in Money in 75-mile Event.

East Liverpool race drivers finished in the money in the anual Labor Day dirt track event at Cadiz, copping second and third places and threatening the winner.

The event, originally billed for 100 miles, was cut to 75, in view of threatening weather and was won by Reichenbach, of Orrville, in a "Fronty-Chevy."

Ray Seitz, of the Seitz Battery Co., this city, was second, in an Overland Special; and W. N. Simms, of the Simms Motor Co., third in a Chalmers Special. Simms finished right behind the leaders, his chances being hampered by trouble in his car's cooling system.

Simms and Seitz probably will enter the East Palestine race on September 11.

Has Champ Lost His Sense of Distance?

They Say He's Missing a Lot of Punches But Experts Say He won't be Missing Those Short Ones in the Ring Against Tunney.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 7.—Can a man who has been out of the ring for three years achieve almost perfect condition and yet, permanently lose his judgment of distance. This doesn't stand to reason and it is the only question, as I see it, that Jack Dempsey will have to answer between now and the night of Sept 23.

His condition is excellent. His speed has lost none of the old sparkle during the years of idleness. He is hitting well, whenever the opposing chin is there to be hit, but is missing a lot of punches, although camp followers assure me that he doing so with less frequency than at Saratoga.

That is well. If Jack Dempsey is to beat Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship of the world, he must hit him. Nobody ever scored a knockout or earned a decision by fanning the other man's pompadour.

Must Hit To Hurt.

However, if one would believe half he hears and all he sees, this element of uncertainty is the only thing that will serve to make a contest of this fight. Give Dempsey condition, give him his speed and the old will to win, and you have quite a fighter. Add even a dash of his former accuracy and it is difficult to see how any man of the present era can beat him; least of all a heavyweight whom one might term a rather insincere hitter.

But he can't hurt Tunney without hitting him. If he continues to miss right up to the day of the fight, then it is possible that the challenger might be able to stab his way to the title.

This, however, brings back the old argument of the hitter versus the boxer: The former might only have to land one good one to bring the stepper down to his own speed. If he lands it in the first round—which, by the way, always has been Dempsey's best—the fight is usually a brief one. If he lands it in the last rounds, he can and often does change the entire complexion of the fight. Dempsey will bull's eye at least one of his punches in ten rounds.

Workouts Are Different.

Another angle that the critics apparently ignore is that Jack Dempsey in a workout is quite another person from the Jack Dempsey under fire in the ring. He crowds his man, there, hitting short, murderous punches that, naturall, haven't the same chance of missing. The leads that Martin Turke and others were slipping yesterday came at long range.

He boxes that way in the training camp for two reasons. One of them is to develop foot work; the other to conserve the current supply of chins. If Dempsey swarmed over these babies every time out, he'd have the camp to himself overnight. Off hand, I would say that it is an excellent bet that he will cut loose, without fear or favor, in the last ten days before the fight. By that time he won't care whether the boys leave or how soon.

The intelligentsia also has been at a loss to account for the fact that the champion has been and is being hit with great readiness. I doubt if Dempsey is greatly worried about this state of affairs. Every man he has fought has hit him. All he asks is that they keep on trying, so that he can get a clean shot at the button.

He's Been Hit Before.

Besides, this is the man who was hit on the jowl by Firpo, Carpentier and Willard and if he could laugh that collection off, it is difficult to see how Tunney's light hitting can annoy him.

The chances are that Dempsey is figuring on marching right into everything that Gene might have in order to get in close for the killing, if any.

That he will be in condition to absorb punishment is now a foregone conclusion. Dempsey worked 40 minutes yesterday and, at the end, breathed as easily as a man in a morris chair. He perspired profusely in the first minute of play, another favorable sign. A third was the fact that his legs—hard, brown and trim—moved that wonderful body of his about as though operated on steel springs.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON.

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

For a low ball the arc of the swing must be flattened, and for a high ball the arc is made more circular. To flatten the arc you do not use a flat swing necessarily. Instead place the feet a few inches farther apart for swing, when a low ball is wanted. For a high ball that will get up into the wind and float with it, place feet a few inches nearer together. If you stand ordinarily with the feet 18 inches apart, for a law ball let them be about four or five inches further apart and, for a high ball, that much closer together. Then swing in the regular way. The extra spread of the feet is accomplished almost wholly by moving the right foot back or forward as the case may be. That is, if you are to stand for a low ball move the left foot forward one inch, say, and the right foot back four inches. Be careful not to go forward the whole five inches when playing for a low ball or instead you will get a skied ball.

PYLE'S WILES LURE MARY

For $50,000 Miss Browne Becomes Pro Netter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Miss Mary K. Browne, of Santa Monica, Cal., former national women's tennis champion and captain of the American team that brought the Wightman cup back from England, will turn professional today. She will meet with Charles C. Pyle, promoter, to formally sign a contract with him to appear in exhibition matches with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the latter's tour of the United States, beginning in New York on October 9.

"My action probably will shock tennis players and followers, but I feel that what I am doing what will be for the good of the game in the end and take a lot of hypocrisy out of lawn tennis in this country," Miss Browne said.

"I do not want to do anything that will injure tennis but it is a matter of business necessity. I am dependent upon my own resources and Mr. Pyle's offer was such I could not refuse it."

While the terms of the contract have not been revealed, it is reported that Miss Browne will be guaranteed $15,0000, with five per cent of the profits. It is estimated that the tour will net her nearly $50,000.

Senate Millionaires and House Plebes Lead Campaigns of Both Big Parties

"The Senate may be a millionaires' club but the House is a poor man's retreat." An almost tacit agreement that this is as it should be finds the major party campaign leaders in the Senate both men of great means, while the House campaign heads are neither in the blue book nor the higher surtax brackets. The Senators are Lawrence C. Phipps, of Colorado, and Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island. The former, Republican leader, is the richest man in the Senate, and Gerry is the richest of Senate Democrats. The campaigners in the House, Will R. Wood (Indiana) and William C. Oldfield (Arkansas Democrat) are much more at home in political give-and-take than in the ballroom.

Yale University To Study Students Who Flunk in Work

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Yale University intends to learn, in the future, why any duly enrolled student flunks his work. The department of psychology at the University will proceed into such study with the opening of the new University term late in September.

The student who after passing entrance examinations fails to keep up with his work and fails in the term examinations will be the particular subject of attention and eventually, the University officials hope, there will be no more flunking.

Due allowance will be made for the student who does not spend enough time at study. He will be treated in another fashion. But the university believes that some students fail in spite of long and earnest study and officials want to know the exact reason.

A tortoise nearly a foot long was found on the links of the Herne Bay Golf Club of England recently.

Haskin's Letter

cars. But now they are seeing the folly of wasting gas, power, and speed in negotiating stiff grades, and they are not so much interested in the matter of climbing a hill without shifting gears as they are in getting where they are going without undue delays and with a minimum of fuel and wear and tear on their machines. Thus, hills are doomed, and with their going will come a demand for a smoother type of highway surface, the banking of all curves, weather-proof road construction, and the like.

"Genius turns to the roads," concludes Mr. Ullman. "The new era is under way. Our roads are not good enough for our cars, and the engineers know it. Within another ten years, it is predicted, the highways of America will be radically different and the simplified highway of today will be recorded pictorially in the museums along with the automobile that has no starter, no closed body, no four-wheel brakes, and no balloon tires."

IDAHO learns that a world court senator can learn from returns in other states. Senator Gooding of Idaho, voted for the world court, in the senate, 'like a good administration senator" and is now runing for re-election, on a platform that declared undying opposition to the world court or any other alliance with European nations. Senator Gooding goes all the way, telling his constitutents that if he had it to do over again, he would vote against the world court.

THE League of Nations complains that Germany is secretly building up a fighting force. Germany is getting ready to fight, of course, and that cannot be prevented. Her people are working hard, her scientists are as able as ever. Her men of 30 have, every one had hard military training and her boys are all trained also.

ABOVE all Germany is rich, "more gold shipped to Germany." You read, every few days. The mark is at par and expected to go above par. Imagine how that must impress France, with her franc below three cents, wealth and scientific knowledge and a hard working trained citizenship mean capacity to fight. Airplanes are quickly built and can be bought.

EUROPE'S salavation lies in just dealing and imitation of our arrangements here, with 48 states on one continent, all enjoying free trade and friendly rivalry from ocean to ocean.

VICE PRESIDENT DAWES, 61 years old, shows how a man should be at 61. He has the energy of a man of 30 at hand. If he should be elected president, fulfilling the plans of many friends, he would be in fact a president of 40 and not 60.

SHERIFF AND DEPUTIES GO TO CLEVELAND TO ARREST U. S. PRISONER

Patrolman is Shot By Bandits Who Get $10,000 Payroll

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 7.—Patrolman Terrance Cunning was shot and seriously wounded today by bandits who stole a payroll of approximately $10,000 from a colored messenger of the Ward Baking company and his guard.

The hold-up occurred near the baking company's office. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

Four Hundred Children Resume Studies in Parochial School.

Public and parochial schools reopened today with an enrollment estimated at 5,400—a record-breaker for the first day in East Liverpool.

Exact figures in the public schools were not available early this afternoon, although they are expected to reach the 5,000 mark when reports are available from all buildings. The registration in the parochial school will total about 400.

Schools were dismissed immediately after registration until this afternoon. Books were distributed and lessons for tomorrow were assigned at the afternoon session, and school work will begin in earnest Wednesday morning.

Police were on the job about the high school building this morning to guard against hazing of freshmen by upper classmen. The presence of four patrolmen had its effect upon the students. However, a few cases of hazing were reported to the school authorities. A few of the freshmen students who appeared at the building with their faces and hands painted, were permitted to return to their homes. The customary ducking which many freshmen have been forced to undergo in previous years was not resorted to, school officials said.

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Postal receipts in 50 selected cities in August totaled $26,714,198.44, an increase of $1,629,657.54, or 6.50 per cent, over the same month a year ago, the post office department announced today.

Cities that led in percentage were Fort Worth, 50.90; Atlanta, 26.33; Los Angeles, 21.97; and Dayton, Ohio, 21.28.

Government Operatives Seek Evidence in Alleged Conspiracy in Detroit, and Toledo.

CANTON, O., Sept. 7.—Sheriff T. W. Kirk and two deputies left here today for Cleveland, where they expected to take Louis Mazer, indicted for murder in connection with the Don. R. Mellett assassination, into custody.

Mazer is now being held by federal authorities there.

Resume Hunt for McDermott.

Federal agents, working "under cover" in several large cities today were reported to be investigating a ge bootlegging ring with a view to exposing the "higher-ups" in the murder.

The goverment operatives gathering evidence in the liquor conspiracy, out of which the slaying is claimed to have grown, were said to be working on ramifications of the ring in Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Pittsburgh today. Evidence which they gather will be turned over to a federal grand jury scheduled to convene in Cleveland next week.

Necessity for a confession to corroborate the circumstantial evidence upon which Mazer, Ben Rudner and Patrick McDermott have been indicted, spurred authorities to more intense action in the nationwide search for McDermott.

McDermott, sought as the alleged hired triggerman and "key witness" has successfully evaded apprehension for nearly two months.

Because a brilliant beam of publicity was thrown upon his escape and because practically every police department in the nation, has been advised to be on the alert for him, the theory that McDermott was murdered by the Mellett death plotters has been advanced many times.

Ollie Harvey Fined $500 After Police Find Beer Cache

Ollie Harvey, colored, St. Clair avenue, is at liberty under bond today pending settlement of a $500 fine, assessed against him by Municipal Judge J. C. Hanley yesterday morning after he pleaded guilty to a charge of the illegal possession of intoxicating liquors.

About 400 bottles of home brew were found under a stairway in the Harvey home when Captain Conley and Desk Sergeant Toland raided his home at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night.

Police claim that this is Harvey's third liquor law violation. He was fined $100 and costs when arraigned before Judge Hanley on his second offense about four months ago.

The accident occurred Tuesday when the child pulled the tablecloth while playing in a walker.

Burial was made in Woodlawn cemetery. Besides the parents, the child is survived by one sister, aged about three.

TERRIFIC RAIN FLOODS PART OF WELLSVILLE

GAS CUT OFF

Inter-city Highway is Millrace, Trolley Service Hit.

Saturday night's heavy rainstorm, the second in two weeks, breaking out in a terrific downpour shortly after 8 o'clock and continuing thereafter in abated force, wreaked most of its havoc in Wellsville. East Liverpool suffered little, if any, damage aside from small slips and mud-covered streets.

The west end of Wellsville, washed out in sections when the McQueen's run sewer broke under stress of huge rocks and logs, again was partially inundated Saturday night.

At Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection, water filled one thoroughfare to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car traffic during the night. The traction company brought into use one of its busses, which transferred passengers from Seventeenth street to the Eighteenth street and Clark avenue stop until the water was drained off Sunday morning.

Several scores of cellars in the district were filled with water which backed up to as far as Fourteenth street.

NEW EARTHQUAKE FELT IN HORTA

LISBON, Sept. 7.—New earthquakes have been felt in Horta, Fayal Island, according to reports received here today.

Although the quakes have been slight they have thrown the population into new panics.

Streets in Horta are still closed due to obstructions from the recent earthquakes and fear that new tremors may cause more buildings to fall.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—American consular business in Horta is being conducted from a small kitchen, which also serves as living quarters, Horace Remillard, American consul, advised the state department today. He did not say whether the consulate had been destroyed or had been made unsafe by the recent earthquake.

All dwellings in Horta are unsafe for occupancy, and requests have been sent to Lisbon for portable houses, Remillard said. He asked for two of the portable buildings, one for use as an office, the other as a dwelling.

COURT BLOCKS DISMISSAL OF ST. CLAIRSVILLE MURDER TRIAL

Mike Dragovich is Charged With Slaying Sheriff.

JURORS CALLED

Gun Expert Claims Deputy's Pistol Killed Samuel Dunfee.

ST CAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 7. — When Mike Dragovich, Provident Ohio, miner, was called before Judge W. W. Cowen in common pleas court here today to answer a first degree murder charge for the assassination of Sheriff Sam L. Dunfee, the defense asked for the dismissal of the charge.

The court overruled the motion.

Calling of petit jurors was started at once.

The defense asked the dismissal on the grounds that a gun expert had declared the bullet which killed Dunfee was fired from a Deputy's gun. The court announced he had a deposition from the alleged gun expert, admitting he was not to be regarded as an expert on firearms.

The action created much excitement in the courtroom.

Probe Disastrous Wreck at Denver; 25 Dead, 50 Hurt

DENVER, Sept. 7.—Railroad authorities, county officials and representatives of the state public utilities commission today were probing the disastrous wreck on the Denver, Rio Grande and Western railroad Sunday which resulted in the death of more than 25, 50 injured and six reported missing.

A careful check up Monday lasting far into the night, disclosed that at least 27 persons met their death when the speeding Scenic Limited left the rails and plunged into the icy waters of the Arkansas river, while six are reported missing and fifty more or less seriously injured.

A coroner's inquest has been postponed until two bodies known to be in the wreckage on the river bed are recovered.

Spanish Mutiny Leaders Arrested, Face Court-Martial

MADRID, Sept. 7.—Court-martial of the leaders of the mutiny of artillery officers is already under way, General Primo de Rivera announced this afternoon, following a cabinet meeting presided over by the king.

The mutiny which threatened a political crisis is now in hand, the premier said.

"Conditions are improving every minute," said General de Rivera. "Court-martials have already begun."

The cabinet authorized the minister of war to execute a decree dismissing artillery officers who were concerned in the mutiny.

A decree dissolving the artillery corps is already drawn up but has not yet been signed by the king.

THREE YOUTHS ARRRESTED FOR CHECK-KITING

Two Others Sought for Issuance of Worthless Paper.

ONE ARRAIGNED

Accused of Operations in Many District Cities.

Alleged operation of five East Liverpool youths, who it is claimed, have been circulating worthless checks in this city, Lisbon, Salem, Columbiana, Warren and other nearby places have been halted with the arrest of three of the five suspects, police said today.

John Densmore, 21, charged with being the leader of the gang, was held for grand jury action upon a charge of forgery by Justice M. K. Zimerman, Lisbon. Harry Martin, 20, and Andrew Siddell, 18, are in the county jail awaiting arraignment. Police are seeking two other alleged confederates.

The youths are charged with having circulated more than 50 bogus checks. Densmore, who, police say, was released from the industrial school a few months ago when he reached the age of 21, was specifically charged with having given C. O. Hawk, Lisbon automobile dealer, a forged check for $135 as part payment on a car. Most of the checks given by the boys are alleged to have been signed "Harry Cartwright," East Liverpool pottery manufacturer, and were made payable at the First National and Dollar Savings banks.

Siddell claims that he had no part in the forgery operations but merely acted as the driver for the others. One of the two still at large is alleged to have cashed a check in East Liverpool and taken the money to Lisbon with which to pay the fine of his father who was in the county jail on a liquor violation charge.

J. R. Richardson, proprietor of a kennel near Columbiana, told police Monday that Densmore had given him a bogus check for $50 as payment for a dog which he purchased about two weeks ago. The dog was located in Midland and returned to Richardson yesterday.

LOIS A. NOBLE RUN DOWN ON RIVER ROAD BY WILLIAM WARE

Child Struck by Car as She Steps From Bus.

SKULL FRACTURED

Four Persons Killed Near Detroit; One at Hyannis, Mass.

Lois Alberta Noble, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Noble, West Sixth street, is dead today, as the result of a fractured skull suffered at 10:45 o'clock yesterday morning when struck by an automobile said by the police to have been driven by William Ware, 1418 Pennsylvania avenue, just after she stepped from a bus near the Colonial pottery on the River road. The child died at the City hospital yesterday afternoon.

Coroner Conducts Inquest.

Coroner J. M. Van Fossan, East Palestine, arrived here today to conduct an inquest. Several witnesses were heard at Wellsville this morning but the case was continued until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The child, accompanied by her elder sister, Sarah, 14, was carrying dinner to her grandfather, John Densmore, Sr. kiln fireman at the Colonial pottery when the accident occurred. The sisters had just stepped from the bus and were walking along the concrete road before crossing to the pottery when Ware's car, the police report says, struck the younger child. The fender of the machine hit the girl on the head, knocking her to the street.

Ware picked up the child and took her to the hospital where Dr. H. A. Turk attended her. The body was removed to the C. N. MacLean undertaking establishment in Wellsville.

Funeral Services Thursday.

The Noble family formerly resided in Wellsville but recently have been living near Hanoverton preparatory to moving to Midland they were residing temporarily with Mrs. Noble's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Densmore, West Sixth street. The parents and one sister survive.

Funeral services will be conducted in the home of the victim's aunt, Mrs. S. G. Wilson, Commerce street, Wellsville at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Burial will be made in Spring Hill cemetery.

5 DEAD, 50 HURT IN RAIL WRECK

Locomotive Telescopes Two Coaches of Excursion Train.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Four separate inquiries were under way today to fix responsibility for the disastrous wreck on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad here last night in which five persons are known to have been killed and at least 50 others injured.

Beside the official railroad investigation, city, county and federal authorities are conducting inquiries.

The wreck occurred when a fast southbound suburban train crashed rear-on into a crowded southbound excursion train while the latter was unloading passengers at a Claybourne station, inside the Chicago city limits.

The last two coaches of the excursion train were telescoped by the locomotive of the rear train.

2,000,000 VOTERS MARCH TO POLLS TO SETTLE PRIMARY CONTESTS FOR FIVE SENATE SEATS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Upwards of two million voters are marching to the polls today in widely scattered sections of the country to settle primary contests involving five seats in the United States senate, and a multitude of lesser offices.

In many respects it is the biggest day of the pre-election political season. From New Hampshire, in New England, to Wisconsin, in the midwest, and out to Nevada and Arizona, in the far southwest, the balloting is in progress today.

In three of these states, Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Nevada, the contests are sharp and the results may have far-reaching effect on the make-up of the seventieth congress. In the other two, Massachusetts and Arizona, the principal fireworks will be reserved until November.

Eyes on Wisconsin.

Political leaders in both parties are chiefly interested in the outcome in Wisconsin, where the La Follette organization is hard after the scalp of Senator Irvine L. Lenroot. The campaign has been a bitter one, even in a state noted for the warmth of its political contests, and the issue between the LaFollette and anti-LaFollette organizations is likely to be close. Senator Lenroot is opposed by Gov. John J. Blaine, a political lieutenant of the late "Fighting Bob."

Lenroot has been savagely attacked for his leadership in the World Court fight in the senate, and for his general record of supporting the legislative policies of the Coolidge administration, as opposed to the principles of "La Follette progressivism." The fight has been complicated enormously, however, by the injection of a variety of state issues involving the governorship.

The betting in Washington is that Lenroot will be beaten, despite the fact he is the only senatorial candidate who has been aided in his fight for renomination by a personal endorsement by President Coolidge.

New Hampshire Fight.

In New Hampshire, there is a keen contest between Senator George H. Moses, one of the original irreconcilables, and ex-Gov. Robert P. Bass, who has attacked Moses for straying off the Collidge reservation on a variety of issues. Bass is running as a simon-pure Coolidge supporter, and has criticised Moses for his votes against the world court, against woman suffrage, and against farm relief. Moses has countered with the charge that Bass is "spending too much money" in the primary.

The prevailing opinion among capital politicians is that Moses will win, although there is a good deal of uneasiness among his friends and supporters as to how the woman vote will go.

In Nevada there is a double-barrelled contest. Senator D. O. Roberts, who, among other things, is the father-in-law of Walter Johnson, the capital's favorite pitcher. The outcome is said to be in doubt.

Among the Nevada Democrats there is also a contest for the senatorial nomination with Raymond T. Baker, former director of the mint, who married Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, favored to win.

In Massachusetts the primary will be held a week from today.

In Arizona, Senator Ralph Cameron has no opposition for renomination by the Republicans. There are two candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination—Representative Carl Hay-

Dutch Submarine Circles Globe; Arrival Arouses U. S. Navy Heads

The recent arrival of the Holland navy submarine KXIII on the Pacific Coast on her journey of 25,000 miles around the globe without consort has aroused considerable discussion among U. S. navy leaders and active "militarists." The submarine, one of the largest to visit this country, is making the trip mainly for the advancement of science, to test undersea gravity, etc., but anti-pacificists point out that a huge number of such submarines could make such a trip from European or Far East shores bent on destruction. Photos show the sub moored at San Francisco and a group of officers in the control pit

CONDEMNED MAN REFUSED WRIT

Negro Slayer's Only Recourse is Executive Clemency.

The supreme court has refused a writ of error to Henry Jackson, negro life term prisoner in the state penitentiary now under sentence to be hanged next Friday for killing Earl Langfitt, penitentiary guard.

Jackson's hanging had once been postponed by Judge Morris of the Marshall county circuit court to permit the appeal to the supreme court, but the only recourse for the prisoner now would be executive clemency.

Jackson, a native of North Carolina, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life from McDowell county. Langfitt was killed March 11, dying from knife wounds and Jackson was tried and convicted in May. The state witnesses testified the guard was stabbed after he had "taken the number" of the prisoner, apparently for a violation of prison rules at the breakfast table. Jackson, however, claimed that the guard first clubbed him when he refused to finish his breakfast and denied any knowledge of having used a knife in the ensuing scuffle, although admitting he carried one in his pocket.

The negro was first sentenced to be hanged July 2, and his attorneys obtained a writ of mandamus from the supreme court to compel a stay of execution until after their appeal. In obedience to this writ Judge Morris postponed the date of execution to September 10.

REV. EHRHEART EXTENDED CALL

Rev. R. C. Ehrheart, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be returned to Chester for another year if the wishes of members of his congregation are complied with at the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh conference Methodist Episcopal church, which meets at Carnegie, Pa., on Tuesday, October 5.

Members of the Chester church recently voted to extend another call to Rev. Mr. Ehrheart. The assignment of pastors will not be announced until the close of the conference meeting on Monday, October 11.

Rev. Mr. Ehrheart came to Chester a year ago from Conway, Pa., where he was located for three years.

CHESTER TEAM IN TWO GAMES

The Chester Industrial league team will, in all probability, wind up the season with two games this week. Only in the event of a double defeat will the schedule be carried over until next week.

Because of the soggy condition of Patterson field, the contest with the Turk-Nash nine which was to have been played on the East Liverpool lot tonight, has been transferred to Smith field. The game will start promptly at 5:30 o'clock.

The Laughlin nine will be faced at Newell Friday night with the weather man's permission.

If Chester wins tonight's contest with the Turk-Nash outfit, it can lose the remaining games and still be tied for the first place position even though the next highest teams wins its remaining games. With victories tonight and Friday night the championship for the last half of the season will be clinched.

The season was to have ended on Sept. 3 but because of wet weather during the last three weeks many contests have been postponed. Unless the unexpected happens, postponed games with Wellsville and Knowles, Taylor and Knowles nines will not be played.

KOREAN PASTOR IN PULPIT HERE

Rev. Robert Chung, native of Korea, who recently graduated from Asbury College at Wilmore, Ky., will occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal church at the morning and evening preaching services next Sunday. He will also address the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Rev. Mr. Chung will return to his native country this fall to engage in missionary work.

The Chester schools re-opened for the 1926-1927 term this morning. Most of the day was given over to registration. School work will probably get underway tomorrow.

ROCK SPRINGS PARK IS CLOSED

Rock Springs Park closed the 1926 season yesterday with a fair-sized crowd in attendance.

Before the resort opens in 1927 it will present an entirely different appearance, according to C. C. Macdonald, lessee of the playground. The grounds are to be beautified, buildings to be repainted and overhauled and nearly $100,000 spent on new amusements.

Macdonald, who has taken a 25-year lease on the resort, which will be known as New Rock Springs park, will come to Chester within next month to take up his residence here and supervise the improvements. His present lease on Summit Beach park, near Akron, expires Sept. 15.

Visiting at Jackson Home.

Mrs. Eva Turner, of Tuscon, Arizona, who has been spending the summer in Kentucky, has arrived in Chester for a few days' visit with Mrs. M. E. Jackson of First street. Mrs. Turner will leave for her home Thursday evening, accompanied by Mrs. Naomi Neilson, Mrs. John Owen and Miss Essie Jackson, who plan to spend the winter in Phoenix, Arizona.

The program will be in charge of Mrs. A. E. Ehrheart. Refreshments will be served by the social committee, with Mrs. George Cook as chairman.

Austria Gives Warm Welcome to Foreign Naval Officials

VIENNA.—Although Austria ceased to be a naval power after the treaty of Trianon, the government has had four official naval visits from foreign powers this year, which would have been excessive even for the Empire.

The American Admiral Wells and staff were the first to come to Vienna from their flagship anchored near Trieste. The Turks and the French sent naval staffs to the Danube republic next and a visit of several hundred English officers will be made this month.

The English will land at Pola, formerly an Austrian naval base, and will be escorted by former Austrian admirals to Vienna.

Strange Stalactites Discovered in Famous Grotto in Paris

PARIS.—Something extraordinary in stalactities have just been discovered in the Grotto du Grand Roc at Laugerie-Basse. In form and delicacy they surpass anything yet found.

They are in the shape of crosses, dragon-flies, root forms, bouquets of coral, flutes and horns. One is exactly like a great salamander and another the reproduction of a large elephant's foot. The foundations are completely crystalline and transparent like glass with a little of the color of honey in them. There are hundreds all assembled together, amalgamated by a kind of bridge or other complicated appendices.

Such formations have been seen in Belgium and Marovia but never in such profusion and exhuberance of forms as in this grotto which was only recently discovered by pure chance. Monsieur Le Bel, a celebrated chemist, noticed, with his collaborator, the presence of innumerable small springs at the base of the great cliffs. In the spring of 1924 they succeeded in penetrating into the labyrinth and there found the amazing formations.

MACK PLAYERS AT THE STRAND

"Clean Show for All" Opens Fall Engagement.

Red Mack and his players, in the big musical comedy 'Love and Dynamite," opened the engagement at the Strand theatre yesterday. It is a "clean show for all." Red Mack the owner of the organization, does not believe in "smut." First and foremost among Red Mack's secret of success, is the theory that the public wants clean, wholesome, entertainment. No scene nor situation, song or line that is any way suggestive or vulgar, is allowed to mar the aspect of this atraction. "The public does not want anything but clean shows and that is just what they are getting," said Red Mack. "I have engaged a company of ladies and gentlemen and artists of the highest caliber and I guess the theatre-going public, will agree with me, after they have seen my show.'

UNITED STATES WITH 500,000 MILES OF IMPROVED ROADS LEADS THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.— As the only billion-dollar "highway" nation in the world, the United States now leads all the rest of the world with 500,000 miles of good roads, it was announced today at thedepartment of commerce.

With a congressional appropriation of $75,000,000 and a state and local fund of $100,000,000 being expended this year, the American people already have poured out $1,002,000,000 on good roads, of this amount the federal government alone has expended $371,701,000.

The broad sweeping network of paved highways, interlacing virtually every state in the union, government officials said, has opened a new field of transportation for American industry, sharply reduced the cost of marketing agriculture products over short distances and permitted millions of Americans "to see America first" for the first time.

"So I hailed a ride and came over here and surrendered. I could get away if I wanted to but I never done anything wrong so why should I run, I have just killed men who tried to kill me and that isn't wrong.

IDAHO learns that a world court senator can learn from returns in other states. Senator Gooding of Idaho, voted for the world court, in the senate, 'like a good administration senator" and is now runing for re-election, on a platform that declared undying opposition to the world court or any other alliance with European nations. Senator Gooding goes all the way, telling his constitutents that if he had it to do over again, he would vote against the world court.

THE League of Nations complains that Germany is secretly building up a fighting force. Germany is getting ready to fight, of course, and that cannot be prevented. Her people are working hard, her scientists are as able as ever. Her men of 30 have, every one had hard military training and her boys are all trained also.

ABOVE all Germany is rich, "more gold shipped to Germany." You read, every few days. The mark is at par and expected to go above par. Imagine how that must impress France, with her franc below three cents, wealth and scientific knowledge and a hard working trained citizenship mean capacity to fight. Airplanes are quickly built and can be bought.

EUROPE'S salavation lies in just dealing and imitation of our arrangements here, with 48 states on one continent, all enjoying free trade and friendly rivalry from ocean to ocean.

VICE PRESIDENT DAWES, 61 years old, shows how a man should be at 61. He has the energy of a man of 30 at hand. If he should be elected president, fulfilling the plans of many friends, he would be in fact a president of 40 and not 60.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 7.—Patrolman Terrance Cunning was shot and seriously wounded today by bandits who stole a payroll of approximately $10,000 from a colored messenger of the Ward Baking company and his guard.

The hold-up occurred near the baking company's office. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

5,400 PUPILS ENROLLED ON OPENING DAY

Few Freshmen Hazed Although Police Are on Job.

FACES PAINTED

Four Hundred Children Resume Studies in Parochial School.

Public and parochial schools reopened today with an enrollment estimated at 5,400—a record-breaker for the first day in East Liverpool.

Exact figures in the public schools were not available early this afternoon, although they are expected to reach the 5,000 mark when reports are available from all buildings. The registration in the parochial school will total about 400.

Schools were dismissed immediately after registration until this afternoon. Books were distributed and lessons for tomorrow were assigned at the afternoon session, and school work will begin in earnest Wednesday morning.

Police were on the job about the high school building this morning to guard against hazing of freshmen by upper classmen. The presence of four patrolmen had its effect upon the students. However, a few cases of hazing were reported to the school authorities. A few of the freshmen students who appeared at the building with their faces and hands painted, were permitted to return to their homes. The customary ducking which many freshmen have been forced to undergo in previous years was not resorted to, school officials said.

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Postal receipts in 50 selected cities in August totaled $26,714,198.44, an increase of $1,629,557.54, or 6.50 per cent, over the same month a year ago, the post office department announced today.

Cities that led in percentage were Fort Worth, 50.90; Atlanta, 26.33; Los Angeles, 21.97; and Dayton, Ohio, 21.28.

HUGE RUM RING IS UNDER FIRE

By PAUL E. BROKAW

CANTON, O., Sept. 7.—Sheriff T. W. Kirk and two deputies left here today for Cleveland, where they expected to take Louis Mazer, indicted for murder in connection with the Don. R. Mellett assassination, into custody.

Mazer is now being held by federal authorities there.

Resume Hunt for McDermott.

Federal agents, working "under cover" in several large cities today were reported to be investigating a huge bootlegging ring with a view to exposing the "higher-ups" in the murder.

The goverment operatives gathering evidence in the liquor conspiracy, out of which the slaying is claimed to have grown, were said to be working on ramifications of the ring in Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Pittsburgh today. Evidence which they gather will be turned over to a federal grand jury scheduled to convene in Cleveland next week.

Necessity for a confession to corroborate the circumstantial evidence upon which Mazer, Ben Rudner and Patrick McDermott have been indicted, spurred authorities to more intense action in the nationwide search for McDermott.

McDermott, sought as the alleged hired triggerman and "key witness" has successfully evaded apprehension for nearly two months.

Because a brilliant beam of publicity was thrown upon his escape and because practically every police department in the nation has been advised to be on the alert for him, the theory that McDermott was murdered by the Mellett death plotters has been advanced many times.

About 400 bottles of home brew were found under a stairway in the Harvey home when Captain Conley and Desk Sergeant Toland raided his home at 7:30 o'clock Saturday night.

TERRIFIC RAIN FLOODS PART OF WELLSVILLE

GAS CUT OFF

Inter-city Highway is Millrace, Trolley Service Hit.

Saturday night's heavy rainstorm, the second in two weeks, breaking out in a terrific downpour shortly after 8 o'clock and continuing thereafter in abated force, wreaked most of its havoc in Wellsville. East Liverpool suffered little, if any, damage aside from small slips and mud-covered streets.

The west end of Wellsville, washed out in sections when the McQueen's run sewer broke under stress of huge rocks and logs, again was partially inundated Saturday night.

At Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection, water filled one thoroughfare to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car traffic during the night. The traction company brought into use one of its busses, which transferred passengers from Seventeenth street to the Eighteenth street and Clark avenue stop until the water was drained off Sunday morning.

Several scores of cellars in the district were filled with water which backed up to as far as Fourteenth street.

NEW EARTHQUAKE FELT IN HORTA

LISBON, Sept. 7.—New earthquakes have been felt in Horta, Fayal Island, according to reports received here today.

Although the quakes have been slight they have thrown the population into new panics.

Streets in Horta are still closed due to obstructions from the recent earthquakes and fear that new tremors may cause more buildings to fall.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—American consular business in Horta is being conducted from a small kitchen, which also serves as living quarters, Horace Remillard, American consul, advised the state department today. He did not say whether the consulate had been destroyed or had been made unsafe by the recent earthquake.

All dwellings in Horta are unsafe for occupancy, and requests have been sent to Lisbon for portable houses, Remillard said. He asked for two of the portable buildings, one for use as an office, the other as a dwelling.

COURT BLOCKS DISMISSAL OF ST. CLAIRSVILLE MURDER TRIAL

Mike Dragovich is Charged With Slaying Sheriff.

JURORS CALLED

Gun Expert Claims Deputy's Pistol Killed Samuel Dunfee.

ST CAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 7. — When Mike Dragovich, Provident Ohio, miner, was called before Judge W. W. Cowen in common pleas court here today to answer a first degree murder charge for the assassination of Sheriff Sam L. Dunfee, the defense asked for the dismissal of the charge.

The court overruled the motion.

Calling of petit jurors was started at once.

The defense asked the dismissal on the grounds that a gun expert had declared the bullet which killed Dunfee was fired from a Deputy's gun. The court announced he had a deposition from the alleged gun expert, admitting he was not to be regarded as an expert on firearms.

The action created much excitement in the courtroom.

THREE YOUTHS ARRRESTED FOR CHECK-KITING

Two Others Sought for Issuance of Worthless Paper.

ONE ARRAIGNED

Accused of Operations in Many District Cities.

Alleged operation of five East Liverpool youths, who it is claimed, have been circulating worthless checks in this city, Lisbon, Salem, Columbiana, Warren and other nearby places have been halted with the arrest of three of the five suspects, police said today.

John Densmore, 21, charged with being the leader of the gang, was held for grand jury action upon a charge of forgery by Justice M. K. Zimerman, Lisbon. Harry Martin, 20, and Andrew Siddell, 18, are in the county jail awaiting arraignment. Police are seeking two other alleged confederates.

The youths are charged with having circulated more than 50 bogus checks. Densmore, who, police say, was released from the industrial school a few months ago when he reached the age of 21, was specifically charged with having given C. O. Hawk, Lisbon automobile dealer, a forged check for $135 as part payment on a car. Most of the checks given by the boys are alleged to have been signed "Harry Cartwright," East Liverpool pottery manufacturer, and were made payable at the First National and Dollar Savings banks.

Siddell claims that he had no part in the forgery operations but merely acted as the driver for the others. One of the two still at large is alleged to have cashed a check in East Liverpool and taken the money to Lisbon with which to pay the fine of his father who was in the county jail on a liquor violation charge.

J. R. Richardson, proprietor of a kennel near Columbiana, told police Monday that Densmore had given him a bogus check for $50 as payment for a dog which he purchased about two weeks ago. The dog was located in Midland and returned to Richardson yesterday.

Roumanian Queen Postpones Journey To United States

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Queen Marie of Roumania has postponed her departure for the United States, because she refused to travel in anything less than a royal suite, and the royal suites on the largest liners are already engaged by Americans who have thus far shown no inclination to give up the regal splendor of those suites for even Queen Marie.

LOIS A. NOBLE RUN DOWN ON RIVER ROAD BY WILLIAM WARE

Child Struck by Car as She Steps From Bus.

SKULL FRACTURED

Four Persons Killed Near Detroit; One at Hyannis, Mass.

Lois Alberta Noble, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Noble, West Sixth street, is dead today, as the result of a fractured skull suffered at 10:45 o'clock yesterday morning when struck by an automobile said by the police to have been driven by William Ware, 1418 Pennsylvania avenue, just after she stepped from a bus near the Colonial pottery on the River road. The child died at the City hospital yesterday afternoon.

Coroner Conducts Inquest.

Coroner J. M. Van Fossan, East Palestine, arrived here today to conduct an inquest. Several witnesses were heard at Wellsville this morning but the case was continued until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The child, accompanied by her elder sister, Sarah, 14, was carrying dinner to her grandfather, John Densmore, Sr. kiln fireman at the Colonial pottery when the accident occurred. The sisters had just stepped from the bus and were walking along the concrete road before crossing to the pottery when Ware's car, the police report says, struck the younger child. The fender of the machine hit the girl on the head, knocking her to the street.

Ware picked up the child and took her to the hospital where Dr. H. A. Turk attended her. The body was removed to the C. N. MacLean undertaking establishment in Wellsville.

Funeral Services Thursday.

The Noble family formerly resided in Wellsville but recently have been living near Hanoverton preparatory to moving to Midland they were residing temporarily with Mrs. Noble's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Densmore, West Sixth street. The parents and one sister survive.

Funeral services will be conducted in the home of the victim's aunt, Mrs. S. G. Wilson, Commerce street, Wellsville at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Burial will be made in Spring Hill cemetery.

2,000,000 VOTERS MARCH TO POLLS TO SETTLE PRIMARY CONTESTS FOR FIVE SENATE SEATS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Upwards of two million voters are marching to the polls today in widely scattered sections of the country to settle primary contests involving five seats in the United States senate, and a multitude of lesser offices.

In many respects it is the biggest day of the pre-election political season. From New Hampshire, in New England, to Wisconsin, in the midwest, and out to Nevada and Arizona, in the far southwest, the balloting is in progress today.

In three of these states, Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Nevada, the contests are sharp and the results may have far-reaching effect on the makeup of the seventieth congress. In the other two, Massachusetts and Arizona, the principal fireworks will be reserved until November.

Eyes on Wisconsin.

Political leaders in both parties are chiefly interested in the outcome in Wisconsin, where the La Follette organization is hard after the scalp of Senator Irvine L. Lenroot. The campaign has been a bitter one, even in a state noted for the warmth of its political contests, and the issue between the LaFollette and anti-LaFollette organizations is likely to be close. Senator Lenroot is opposed by Gov. John J. Blaine, a political lieutenant of the late "Fighting Bob."

Lenroot has been savagely attacked for his leadership in the World Court fight in the senate, and for his general record of supporting the legislative policies of the Coolidge administration, as opposed to the principles of "La Follette progressivism." The fight has been complicated enormously, however, by the injection of a variety of state issues involving the governorship.

The betting in Washington is that Lenroot will be beaten, despite the fact he is the only senatorial candidate who has been aided in his fight for renomination by a personal endorsement by President Coolidge.

New Hampshire Fight.

In New Hampshire, there is a keen contest between Senator George H. Moses, one of the original irreconcilables, and ex-Gov. Robert P. Bass, who has attacked Moses for straying off the Colidge reservation on a variety of issues. Bass is running as a simon-pure Coolidge supporter, and has criticised Moses for his votes against the world court, against woman suffrage, and against farm relief. Moses has countered with the charge that Bass is "spending too much money" in the primary.

The prevailing opinion among capital politicians is that Moses will win, although there is a good deal of uneasiness among his friends and supporters as to how the woman vote will go.

In Nevada there is a double-barrelled contest. Senator D. O. Roberts, who, among other things, is the father-in-law of Walter Johnson, the capital's favorite pitcher. The outcome is said to be in doubt.

Among the Nevada Democrats there is also a contest for the senatorial nomination with Raymond T. Baker, former director of the mint, who married Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, favored to win.

In Massachusetts the primary will be held a week from today.

In Arizona, Senator Ralph Cameron has no opposition for renomination by the Republicans. There are two candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination—Representative Carl Hay-

GLITTER

BOOK ONE—XI.

Jock missed the second football game of the season; he spent that afternoon in New York with Yvonne. She had telephoned him the night before, suggesting that he do this. "Really, Jock Hamill, I'm not at all in the mood to travel all the way out there tomorrow. You come here instead."

In any other girl, this calm change of plan without any sufficient reason would have enraged him. In Yvonne it was merely divertingly characteristic. Jock acceded to it with scarcely a protest.

And so they sat together on a huge black divan that faced the fireplace

in Yvonne's living room. The window shades were drawn, giving an effect of twilight at 3 o'clock, and here and there about the room lamps diffused a lovely blushing glow. Yvonne leaned against a pile of cushions that Jock thought must have been chosen just to match her. A russet one, like her hair; a green one, like her tea gown; and one so precisely the hue of her gray eyes that they seemed like sample pieces of its material. She wore tiny tall-heeled slippers with French toes, and no stockings, and her legs were as delicately creamy and flawless as the skin of her neck and arms.

For an hour, while the fire blazed at their feet and their cigarettes filled the room with a thin fine mist, they talked generalities. A long dreamy hour, full of a brooding peace. Jock felt drugged with it. He felt that he wanted it never to end. . . . Firelight and Yvonne. Little quiet-leaping flames, and Yvonne's voice, like a lullaby. And Yvonne's beauty to look at, to drink up with the eyes. . . . Incredible to remember that somewhere men were playing football and other men were watching them and there was a tumult and a roar and a delirium. He smiled contentedly, thinking this. He would not have parted with this hour for any game that was ever played, or ever would be.

Generalities. Religion again, poetry, music, life and letters. Ever and anon he tried to swing the conversation around to more personal topics. Always Yvonne forestalled him.

Then, unexpectedly, she did it herself. There had been a little silence, and she said, "I have been thinking of you, Jock."

Jock answered, "I was thinking of you, too. I've been thinking of you to the exclusion of every one and everything else, since the very first instant I saw you."

Yvonne turned her head and regarded him gravely. "Yes, that's true, isn't it," she observed after a while, as though she had made quite sure it was true. "Well, what have you been thinking?"

"Mostly in interrogation-points. Wondering who you are, and—and whether or not you're married."

"I'm not married."

She said this expressionlessly, as a person might say "I'm not tired" or "I'm not hungry." But it rang in Jock's ears like a paean of happiness. It shook him from his lethargy. He felt of a sudden that he could not sit still—that he must rise and leap about and wave his arms like a madman for the sheer joy of it. "Oh, say that again!" he implored her.

Yvonne smiled at him. "Child!"

"I know—but say it!"

"I am not married."

They stared at one another for a long intense moment. Then Yvonne laid her fingers lightly across Jock's mouth. "Don't tell me what you're thinking now," she said. "Because I don't want you to tell me."

Jock seized the fingers and kissed them, and the accumulated vague emotions of the past two weeks crystallized all at once, took definite shape, came clamoring to be cried aloud that Yvonne might hear them. He knew, now. He was sure, now. "I've got to tell you," he said huskily. "I've got to—Yvonne—I love you, I love you so—"

She broke away from him and stood up, silhouetted against the mantel, gazing at him. "Do you remember the last thing I said to you when you left here the other day?" she queried.

"Of course."

"What was it?"

"You said, 'I'm sorry for you'—"

Yvonne nodded. "This is what I meant."

"You were sorry because you knew I'd fall in love with you? Yvonne—"

"Listen to me!" She had silenced him with a gesture. "Listen, because I shall probably never tell you the truth again. You'll be unhappy if you love me. You'll be miserable. Oh, I know—I know you. You told me more about yourself that day at luncheon that you realize—more, much more, than you actually said. And I've thought about you, and I understand you. You're very young, and sensitive, and you have something precious. You have ideals. Don't you—can't you see how I would hurt you? You look at me and think, 'I love that woman.' You don't know. You don't know. Why, Jock Hamill, can't you see there's nothing here? Nothing inside that you would love? That's what I'm trying to tell you. I've only beauty. Skin deep. That's a platitude, but it's true with me. I'm nothing but — what was that word you used? Glitter. That was it. I'm really nothing but glitter, Jock."

Her earnestness was lost on him. He knew only that she was wonderful and desirable and near, so near that he had but to put out his arms to hold her imprisoned. He fought down his impulse to do this, and answered her impatiently, almost angrily. "Yvonne — don't you mustn't say things like that! I love you, worship you—I'll always love you—do you think love is a thing one can drop like a toy because some one says, 'That isn't what you want?' It is what I want! It's what I know now I can't live without—loving you. Yvonne, is there any reason why I can't? Do you love some one else, so that I'm only making myself ridiculous in your eyes? Is that what you want me to know?"

"No," said Yvonne slowly. "No, I don't love anyone else."

Then Jock put out his arms and caught her to him, and a thing like a sob welled up in him so that he could not speak. He touched his hands to her hair, her glorious hair, and to the line of her cheek, and very gently, very softly, he kissed her eyelids, her throat, her mouth. . . . Ethereal kisses, not of the flesh, because he was full of a tenderness and a reverence stronger and greater than passion.

And bye and bye she held herself away, at arms' length, and her eyes seemed to bear down into the heart of him. For an age. For an eternity. And at least she shrugged and said, "So be it. But I told you the truth. And sometime, when you learn that it was the truth, I want you to remember that I told you—once—my dear."

Q. Has a man ever driven an airplane at a speed of 250 miles an hour? J. D.

A. The maximum airplane speed record is held by France by a man named Bonnett, made December 11, 1924, straightaway record of 278.480 miles per hour. Lieut. Bettis of the Army Air Service holds the record for the 100 kilometer course of 249.342 miles per hour.

Q. What country has the most suicides? W. A. D.

A. Saxony, with a rate of 35 per 100,000 of population.

Q. How many kinds of honey are sold commercially? R. P.

A. There are four kinds of honey. Comb honey is the product in the comb, just as it comes from the hive. Virgin honey is that which flows from the combs. Strained honey is that which has been extracted from the combs, strained, and put up in bottles or cans. It forms about nine-tenths of all the honey sold. Candied honey is the honey that has been allowed to crystallize into a kind of sugar.

CONDEMNED MAN REFUSED WRIT

Negro Slayer's Only Recourse is Executive Clemency.

The supreme court has refused a writ of error to Henry Jackson, negro life term prisoner in the state penitentiary now under sentence to be hanged next Friday for killing Earl Langfitt, penitentiary guard.

Jackson's hanging had once been postponed by Judge Morris of the Marshall county circuit court to permit the appeal to the supreme court, but the only recourse for the prisoner now would be executive clemency.

Jackson, a native of North Carolina, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life from McDowell county. Langfitt was killed March 11, dying from knife wounds and Jackson was tried and convicted in May. The state witnesses testified the guard was stabbed after he had "taken the number" of the prisoner, apparently for a violation of prison rules at the breakfast table. Jackson, however, claimed that the guard first clubbed him when he refused to finish his breakfast and denied any knowledge of having used a knife in the ensuing scuffle, although admitting he carried one in his pocket.

The negro was first sentenced to be hanged July 2, and his attorneys obtained a writ of mandamus from the supreme court to compel a stay of execution until after their appeal. In obedience to this writ Judge Morris postponed the date of execution to September 10.

REV. EHRHEART EXTENDED CALL

Rev. R. C. Ehrheart, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be returned to Chester for another year if the wishes of members of his congregation are complied with at the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh conference Methodist Episcopal church, which meets at Carnegie, Pa., on Tuesday, October 5.

Members of the Chester church recently voted to extend another call to Rev. Mr. Ehrheart. The assignment of pastors will not be announced until the close of the conference meeting on Monday, October 11.

Rev. Mr. Ehrheart came to Chester a year ago from Conway, Pa., where he was located for three years.

CHESTER TEAM IN TWO GAMES

The Chester Industrial league team will, in all probability, wind up the season with two games this week. Only in the event of a double defeat will the schedule be carried over until next week.

Because of the soggy condition of Patterson field, the contest with the Turk-Nash nine which was to have been played on the East Liverpool lot tonight, has been transferred to Smith field. The game will start promptly at 5:30 o'clock.

The Laughlin nine will be faced at Newell Friday night with the weather man's permission.

If Chester wins tonight's contest with the Turk-Nash outfit, it can lose the remaining games and still be tied for the first place position even though the next highest teams wins its remaining games. With victories tonight and Friday night the championship for the last half of the season will be clinched.

The season was to have ended on Sept. 3 but because of wet weather during the last three weeks many contests have been postponed. Unless the unexpected happens, postponed games with Wellsville and Knowles, Taylor and Knowles nines will not be played.

KOREAN PASTOR IN PULPIT HERE

Rev. Robert Chung, native of Korea, who recently graduated from Asbury College at Wilmore, Ky., will occupy the pulpit of the First Methodist Episcopal church at the morning and evening preaching services next Sunday. He will also address the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Rev. Mr. Chung will return to his native country this fall to engage in missionary work.

SCHOOLS RE-OPEN FOR FALL TERM

The Chester schools re-opened for the 1926-1927 term this morning. Most of the day was given over to registration. School work will probably get underway tomorrow.

No figures relative to the enrollment were available today, but it is expected to show a slight increase over last year's report.

ROCK SPRINGS PARK IS CLOSED

Rock Springs Park closed the 1926 season yesterday with a fair-sized crowd in attendance.

Before the resort opens in 1927 it will present an entirely different appearance, according to C. C. Macdonald, lessee of the playground. The grounds are to be beautified, buildings to be repainted and overhauled and nearly $100,000 spent on new amusements.

Macdonald, who has taken a 25-year lease on the resort, which will be known as New Rock Springs park, will come to Chester within next month to take up his residence here and supervise the improvements. His present lease on Summit Beach park, near Akron, expires Sept. 15.

Austria Gives Warm Welcome to Foreign Naval Officials

VIENNA.—Although Austria ceased to be a naval power after the treaty of Trianon, the government has had four official naval visits from foreign powers this year, which would have been excessive even for the Empire.

The American Admiral Wells and staff were the first to come to Vienna from their flagship anchored near Trieste. The Turks and the French sent naval staffs to the Danube republic next and a visit of several hundred English officers will be made this month.

The English will land at Pola, formerly an Austrian naval base, and will be escorted by former Austrian admirals to Vienna.

Strange Stalactites Discovered in Famous Grotto in Paris

PARIS.—Something extraordinary in stalactities have just been discovered in the Grotto du Grand Roc at Laugerie-Basse. In form and delicacy they surpass anything yet found.

They are in the shape of crosses, dragon-flies, root forms, bouquets of coral, flutes and horns. One is exactly like a great salamander and another the reproduction of a large elephant's foot. The foundations are completely crystalline and transparent like glass with a little of the color of honey in them. There are hundreds all assembled together, amalgamated by a kind of bridge or other complicated appendices.

Such formations have been seen in Belgium and Marovia but never in such profusion and exhuberance of forms as in this grotto which was only recently discovered by pure chance. Monsieur Le Bel, a celebrated chemist, noticed, with his collaborator, the presence of innumerable small springs at the base of the great cliffs. In the spring of 1924 they succeeded in penetrating into the labyrinth and there found the amazing formations.

MACK PLAYERS AT THE STRAND

"Clean Show for All" Opens Fall Engagement.

Red Mack and his players, in the big musical comedy "Love and Dynamite," opened the engagement at the Strand theatre yesterday. It is a "clean show for all." Red Mack the owner of the organization, does not believe in "smut." First and foremost among Red Mack's secret of success, is the theory that the public wants clean, wholesome, entertainment. No scene nor situation, song or line that is any way suggestive or vulgar, is allowed to mar the aspect of this atraction. "The public does not want anything but clean shows and that is just what they are getting," said Red Mack. "I have engaged a company of ladies and gentlemen and artists of the highest caliber and I guess the theatre-going public, will agree with me, after they have seen my show."

UNITED STATES WITH 500,000 MILES OF IMPROVED ROADS LEADS THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.— As the only billion-dollar "highway" nation in the world, the United States now leads all the rest of the world with 500,000 miles of good roads, it was announced today at thedepartment of commerce.

With a congressional appropriation of $75,000,000 and a state and local fund of $100,000,000 being expended this year, the American people already have poured out $1,002,000,000 on good roads, of this amount the federal government alone has expended $371,701,000.

The broad sweeping network of paved highways, interlacing virtually every state in the union, government officials said, has opened a new field of transportation for American industry, sharply reduced the cost of marketing agriculture products over short distances and permitted millions of Americans "to see America first" for the first time.

"So I hailed a ride and came over here and surrendered. I could get away if I wanted to but I never done anything wrong so why should I run, I have just killed men who tried to kill me and that isn't wrong.

The Legion In France

There has been some talk of the American Legion, which has planned to hold its 1927 convention in France, taking it somewhere else because of French demonstrations lately against Americans.

The evidences of unfriendliness and hostility reported from France naturally suggest such a change. Many Americans feel that it would be unwise for our service men to go there en masse when such feeling prevails, because it might be embarrasing on both sides and might even lead to violent conflict.

The two big French soldier organizations, however, deprecate any such action, insisting that the hostile demonstrations against Americans have been exaggerated, that they will all be glad to see their American "buddies" and that nothing but courtesy and friendliness need be expected.

This is probably true. However the French civilians may feel, the French soldiers doubtless realize what the American troops did for France, and it is hardly likely their visit would be made unpleasant. The whole French attitude, too, may be changed a year from now.

The American veterans are doubtless right in their decision to carry out the arrangements made and proceed to France when the time comes, just as if nothing had happened. The less formal attention is paid to international unpleasantnesses, the sooner they disappear. America and France will yet be good friends again. Look at the bitterness there was between America and Germany a few years ago, with far greater reason—and now!

Little Olive Branches

Delegates to the International Democratic Congress, meeting in France, say that "children in school hold in their hands the hope of world peace."

Twenty-three nations are represented in that congress. Much may be accomplished, the leaders say, through the exchange of letters by children representing all those nations, by the plan used already by thousands of American and French children.

It makes a good starter, at least. It is good for children to correspond with children of other countries, widening their viewpoint and teaching them that the boys and girls of other races are very much like them, with only enough difference to make them interesting. Youngsters and grown-ups of all races need to learn that.

There was hope, for a little while, that world peace might come in this generation, after the great sacrifice of the World war. The hope has vanished from most minds. The task was too great.

The hope of peace is in the future and therefore in the children. If they are taught wisely, then their generation, when it comes to maturity and power—or the next generation, or the next after that—may accomplish what the world wants.

Credit Losses

The American Institution of Accountants is studying credit conditions, trying to avoid some of the credit losses. It may well do so. The credit criminal collects $250,000,000 annually from American business. Fake bankrupts take a huge toll. People who charge a lot of stuff and then move out of town are another drain.

The ordinary person who works hard and honestly, but lives close to the line and has a difficult time paying his bills in case of illness or any emergency, finds it almost impossible to understand how the clever credit rascals get away with their loot.

This story is told in one city's building circles:

A man estalished credit by conducting three or four building operations according to the conventional rules of the game. Then he found an opportunity to buy seven lots with a small down payment. He got large construction loans and started in building all seven houses at once. Usually a builder starts one or two, then moves masons on to another while the carpenters proceed with the first, and so on, keeping all the kinds of workmen busy. Being honest themselves, the supply men merely thought his method queer and suspected no evil.

After a month of frenzied work with much overtime, he collected a large part of his loan on the basis of work finished. He then stopped work and skipped. Supply men are holding the bag. He has the money and they have bill receivable and that's all. The bank cannot collect unless it finishes the houses and sells them.

Lawyers say the builder committed no legal crime. If he ever comes back, he can be sued. But "it is not a crime to owe money."

This is an ingenious, unusual and extreme case, but it illustrates the point.

You can't always tell what's in a name, but anyway Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya (bless him for that "T.") was keynoter at the opening of the Toronto Exposition, and is said to have cast a spell over his audience.

There seems to be some question as to which are more help to a lady swimmer—tugs or children.

Maybe the grease they complain of on the Atlantic coast is washed over from the channel swimmers.

Tomboy Taylor— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Fifth avenue and Broadway are a parade ground for an almost constant procession of the oddly dressed. Some are seekers of publicity and others are merely harmless and often half-cracked.

Mumbling Moe has for many years roamed the avenue curbs salvaging pins from the gutters. He has a straggly beard and in all seasons wears a half dozen overcoats, the outer one of which is decorated with the products of his search.

The gray derbied twins are crisp, elderly gentlemen—alike as two peas—who usually emerge from Central Park in the late afternoon and stroll as far south as the Waldorf. They have a Brummelish flair, austere dignity and are apparently oblivious of pedestrianic gazing.

Lower Fifth avenue offers two women in black who promenade at dusk. They walk on opposite sides of the street and apparently try to keep in step. They are doubtless slightly mad. When they reach a certain corner they exchange signals and scuttle out side streets.

In Times Square almost daily appears a former pugilist, also mildly touched, who shadow boxes with an imaginary foe on the sidewalk and when a crowd collects sings a song and vanishes. Police do not bother him. If the crowd grows too big they merely wave him away. He is a drug addict.

In the same district is a hatless man who carries an alpenstock and now and then stops to yodel. Also a man who wears a green derby and white spats and passes out little printed cards with the meaningless twaddle: "Life is logical but mediocre."

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

A cafe near the Coentes Slip offers fried seagull's eggs. And a Chinese place on Broadway has jellied bear meat.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE CANDIDATE.

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

BOOK ONE—XI.

Jock missed the second football game of the season; he spent that afternoon in New York with Yvonne. She had telephoned him the night before, suggesting that he do this. "Really, Jock Hamill, I'm not at all in the mood to travel all the way out there tomorrow. You come here instead."

In any other girl, this calm change of plan without any sufficient reason would have enraged him. In Yvonne it was merely divertingly characteristic. Jock acceded to it with scarcely a protest.

And so they sat together on a huge black divan that faced the fireplace

in Yvonne's living room. The window shades were drawn, giving an effect of twilight at 3 o'clock, and here and there about the room lamps diffused a lovely blushing glow. Yvonne leaned against a pile of cushions that Jock thought must have been chosen just to match her. A russet one, like her hair; a green one, like her tea gown; and one so precisely the hue of her gray eyes that they seemed like sample pieces of its material. She wore tiny tall-heeled slippers with French toes, and no stockings, and her legs were as delicately creamy and flawless as the skin of her neck and arms.

For an hour, while the fire blazed at their feet and their cigarettes filled the room with a thin fine mist, they talked generalities. A long dreamy hour, full of a brooding peace. Jock felt drugged with it. He felt that he wanted it never to end. . . . Firelight and Yvonne. Little quiet-leaping flames, and Yvonne's voice, like a lullaby. And Yvonne's beauty to look at, to drink up with the eyes. . . . Incredible to remember that somewhere men were playing football and other men were watching them and there was a tumult and a roar and a delirium. He smiled contentedly, thinking this. He would not have parted with this hour for any game that was ever played, or ever would be.

Generalities. Religion again, poetry, music, life and letters. Ever and anon he tried to swing the conversation around to more personal topics. Always Yvonne forestalled him.

Then, unexpectedly, she did it herself. There had been a little silence, and she said, "I have been thinking of you, Jock."

Jock answered, "I was thinking of you, too. I've been thinking of you to the exclusion of every one and everything else, since the very first instant I saw you."

Yvonne turned her head and regarded him gravely. "Yes, that's true, isn't it," she observed after a while, as though she had made quite sure it was true. "Well, what have you been thinking?"

"Mostly in interrogation-points. Wondering who you are, and—and whether or not you're married."

"I'm not married."

She said this expressionlessly, as a person might say "I'm not tired" or "I'm not hungry." But it rang in Jock's ears like a paean of happiness. It shook him from his lethargy. He felt of a sudden that he could not sit still—that he must rise and leap about and wave his arms like a madman for the sheer joy of it. "Oh, say that again!" he implored her.

Yvonne smiled at him. "Child!"

"I know—but say it!"

"I am not married."

They stared at one another for a long intense moment. Then Yvonne laid her fingers lightly across Jock's mouth. "Don't tell me what you're thinking now," she said. "Because I don't want you to tell me."

Jock seized the fingers and kissed them, and the accumulated vague emotions of the past two weeks crystallized all at once, took definite shape, came clamoring to be cried aloud that Yvonne might hear them. He knew, now. He was sure, now. "I've got to tell you," he said huskily. "I've got to—Yvonne—I love you, I love you so—"

She broke away from him and stood up, silhouetted against the mantel, gazing at him. "Do you remember the last thing I said to you when you left here the other day?" she queried.

"Of course."

"What was it?"

"You said, 'I'm sorry for you'—"

Yvonne nodded. "This is what I meant."

"You were sorry because you knew I'd fall in love with you? Yvonne—"

"Listen to me!" She had silenced him with a gesture. "Listen, because I shall probably never tell you the truth again. You'll be unhappy if you love me. You'll be miserable. Oh, I know—I know you. You told me more about yourself that day at luncheon that you realize—more, much more, than you actually said. And I've thought about you, and I understand you. You're very young, and sensitive, and you have something precious. You have ideals. Don't you—can't you see how I would hurt you? You look at me and think, 'I love that woman.' You don't know. You don't know. Why, Jock Hamill, can't you see there's nothing here? Nothing inside that you would love? That's what I'm trying to tell you. I've only beauty. Skin deep. That's a platitude, but it's true with me. I'm nothing but — what was that word you used? Glitter. That was it. I'm really nothing but glitter, Jock."

Her earnestness was lost on him. He knew only that she was wonderful and desirable and near, so near that he had but to put out his arms to hold her imprisoned. He fought down his impulse to do this, and answered her impatiently, almost angrily. "Yvonne — don't you mustn't say things like that! I love you, worship you—I'll always love you—do you think love is a thing one can drop like a toy because some one says, 'That isn't what you want?' It is what I want! It's what I know now I can't live without—loving you. Yvonne, is there any reason why I can't? Do you love some one else, so that I'm only making myself ridiculous in your eyes? Is that what you want me to know?"

"No," said Yvonne slowly. "No, I don't love anyone else."

Then Jock put out his arms and caught her to him, and a thing like a sob welled up in him so that he could not speak. He touched his hands to her hair, her glorious hair, and to the line of her cheek, and very gently, very softly, he kissed her eyelids, her throat, her mouth. . . . Ethereal kisses, not of the flesh, because he was full of a tenderness and a reverence stronger and greater than passion.

And bye and bye she held herself away, at arms' length, and her eyes seemed to bear down into the heart of him. For an age. For an eternity. And at least she shrugged and said, "So be it. But I told you the truth. And sometime, when you learn that it was the truth, I want you to remember that I told you—once—my dear."

Her Tragic Mistake

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

"The house was large and lonely. I was frightened. Terry had called, and I had just answered, when there came a terrific crash, and—"

The Legion In France

There has been some talk of the American Legion, which has planned to hold its 1927 convention in France, taking it somewhere else because of French demonstrations lately against Americans.

The evidences of unfriendliness and hostility reported from France naturally suggest such a change. Many Americans feel that it would be unwise for our service men to go there en masse when such feeling prevails, because it might be embarrasing on both sides and might even lead to violent conflict.

The two big French soldier organizations, however, deprecate any such action, insisting that the hostile demonstrations against Americans have been exaggerated, that they will all be glad to see their American "buddies" and that nothing but courtesy and friendliness need be expected.

This is probably true. However the French civilians may feel, the French soldiers doubtless realize what the American troops did for France, and it is hardly likely their visit would be made unpleasant. The whole French attitude, too, may be changed a year from now.

The American veterans are doubtless right in their decision to carry out the arrangements made and proceed to France when the time comes, just as if nothing had happened. The less formal attention is paid to international unpleasantnesses, the sooner they disappear. America and France will yet be good friends again. Look at the bitterness there was between America and Germany a few years ago, with far greater reason—and now!

Little Olive Branches

Delegates to the International Democratic Congress, meeting in France, say that "children in school hold in their hands the hope of world peace."

Twenty-three nations are represented in that congress. Much may be accomplished, the leaders say, through the exchange of letters by children representing all those nations, by the plan used already by thousands of American and French children.

It makes a good starter, at least. It is good for children to correspond with children of other countries, widening their viewpoint and teaching them that the boys and girls of other races are very much like them, with only enough difference to make them interesting. Youngsters and grown-ups of all races need to learn that.

There was hope, for a little while, that world peace might come in this generation, after the great sacrifice of the World war. The hope has vanished from most minds. The task was too great.

The hope of peace is in the future and therefore in the children. If they are taught wisely, then their generation, when it comes to maturity and power—or the next generation, or the next after that—may accomplish what the world wants.

Credit Losses

The American Institution of Accountants is studying credit conditions, trying to avoid some of the credit losses. It may well do so. The credit criminal collects $250,000,000 annually from American business. Fake bankrupts take a huge toll. People who charge a lot of stuff and then move out of town are another drain.

The ordinary person who works hard and honestly, but lives close to the line and has a difficult time paying his bills in case of illness or any emergency, finds it almost impossible to understand how the clever credit rascals get away with their loot.

This story is told in one city's building circles:

A man estalished credit by conducting three or four building operations according to the conventional rules of the game. Then he found an opportunity to buy seven lots with a small down payment. He got large construction loans and started in building all seven houses at once. Usually a builder starts one or two, then moves masons on to another while the carpenters proceed with the first, and so on, keeping all the kinds of workmen busy. Being honest themselves, the supply men merely thought his method queer and suspected no evil.

After a month of frenzied work with much overtime, he collected a large part of his loan on the basis of work finished. He then stopped work and skipped. Supply men are holding the bag. He has the money and they have bill receivable and that's all. The bank cannot collect unless it finishes the houses and sells them.

Lawyers say the builder committed no legal crime. If he ever comes back, he can be sued. But "it is not a crime to owe money."

This is an ingenious, unusual and extreme case, but it illustrates the point.

You can't always tell what's in a name, but anyway Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya (bless him for that "T.") was keynoter at the opening of the Toronto Exposition, and is said to have cast a spell over his audience.

There seems to be some question as to which are more help to a lady swimmer—tugs or children.

Maybe the grease they complain of on the Atlantic coast is washed over from the channel swimmers.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Fifth avenue and Broadway are a parade ground for an almost constant procession of the oddly dressed. Some are seekers of publicity and others are merely harmless and often half-cracked.

Mumbling Moe has for many years roamed the avenue curbs salvaging pins from the gutters. He has a straggly beard and in all seasons wears a half dozen overcoats, the outer one of which is decorated with the products of his search.

The gray derbied twins are crisp, elderly gentlemen—alike as two peas—who usually emerge from Central Park in the late afternoon and stroll as far south as the Waldorf. They have a Brummelish flair, austere dignity and are apparently oblivious of pedestrianic gazing.

Lower Fifth avenue offers two women in black who promenade at dusk. They walk on opposite sides of the street and apparently try to keep in step. They are doubtless slightly mad. When they reach a certain corner they exchange signals and scuttle out side streets.

In Times Square almost daily appears a former pugilist, also mildly touched, who shadow boxes with an imaginary foe on the sidewalk and when a crowd collects sings a song and vanishes. Police do not bother him. If the crowd grows too big they merely wave him away. He is a drug addict.

In the same district is a hatless man who carries an alpenstock and now and then stops to yodel. Also a man who wears a green derby and white spats and passes out little printed cards with the meaningless twaddle: "Life is logical but mediocre."

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

A cafe near the Coentes Slip offers fried seagull's eggs. And a Chinese place on Broadway has jellied bear meat.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south-bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction. An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south-bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE CANDIDATE.

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

Her Tragic Mistake

"The house was large and lonely. I was frightened. Terry had called, and I had just answered, when there came a terrific crash, and—"
From "Out of the Storm" in October True Story Magazine

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

Dear Sir:

Being a minister of the Gospel, I find True Story a help in warning young people against the trials and temptations of life. If more mothers would provide this magazine for their girls to read we ministers would hear less of the sad stories of fallen girls. If this is worth anything to you in carrying on the work, I give you permission to use this in any way you see fit. Best wishes for your continued success.

Her Tragic Mistake

"The house was large and lonely. I was frightened. Terry had called, and I had just answered, when there came a terrific crash, and—"
From "Out of the Storm" in October True Story Magazine

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

Finds True Story A Great Help

Dear Sir:

Being a minister of the Gospel, I find True Story a help in warning young people against the trials and temptations of life. If more mothers would provide this magazine for their girls to read we ministers would hear less of the sad stories of fallen girls. May God bless you in your work of helping the young by warning them of the dangers in life. If this is worth anything to you in carrying on the work, I give you permission to use this in any way you see fit. Best wishes for your continued success.

Yours very truly,

The Legion In France

There has been some talk of the American Legion, which has planned to hold its 1927 convention in France, taking it somewhere else because of French demonstrations lately against Americans.

The evidences of unfriendliness and hostility reported from France naturally suggest such a change. Many Americans feel that it would be unwise for our service men to go there en masse when such feeling prevails, because it might be embarrasing on both sides and might even lead to violent conflict.

The two big French soldier organizations, however, deprecate any such action, insisting that the hostile demonstrations against Americans have been exaggerated, that they will all be glad to see their American "buddies" and that nothing but courtesy and friendliness need be expected.

This is probably true. However the French civilians may feel, the French soldiers doubtless realize what the American troops did for France, and it is hardly likely their visit would be made unpleasant. The whole French attitude, too, may be changed a year from now.

The American veterans are doubtless right in their decision to carry out the arrangements made and proceed to France when the time comes, just as if nothing had happened. The less formal attention is paid to international unpleasantnesses, the sooner they disappear. America and France will yet be good friends again. Look at the bitterness there was between America and Germany a few years ago, with far greater reason—and now!

Little Olive Branches

Delegates to the International Democratic Congress, meeting in France, say that "children in school hold in their hands the hope of world peace."

Twenty-three nations are represented in that congress. Much may be accomplished, the leaders say, through the exchange of letters by children representing all those nations, by the plan used already by thousands of American and French children.

It makes a good starter, at least. It is good for children to correspond with children of other countries, widening their viewpoint and teaching them that the boys and girls of other races are very much like them, with only enough difference to make them interesting. Youngsters and grown-ups of all races need to learn that.

There was hope, for a little while, that world peace might come in this generation, after the great sacrifice of the World war. The hope has vanished from most minds. The task was too great.

The hope of peace is in the future and therefore in the children. If they are taught wisely, then their generation, when it comes to maturity and power—or the next generation, or the next after that—may accomplish what the world wants.

Credit Losses

The American Institution of Accountants is studying credit conditions, trying to avoid some of the credit losses. It may well do so. The credit criminal collects $250,000,000 annually from American business. Fake bankrupts take a huge toll. People who charge a lot of stuff and then move out of town are another drain.

The ordinary person who works hard and honestly, but lives close to the line and has a difficult time paying his bills in case of illness or any emergency, finds it almost impossible to understand how the clever credit rascals get away with their loot.

This story is told in one city's building circles:

A man estalished credit by conducting three or four building operations according to the conventional rules of the game. Then he found an opportunity to buy seven lots with a small down payment. He got large construction loans and started in building all seven houses at once. Usually a builder starts one or two, then moves masons on to another while the carpenters proceed with the first, and so on, keeping all the kinds of workmen busy. Being honest themselves, the supply men merely thought his method queer and suspected no evil.

After a month of frenzied work with much overtime, he collected a large part of his loan on the basis of work finished. He then stopped work and skipped. Supply men are holding the bag. He has the money and they have bill receivable and that's all. The bank cannot collect unless it finishes the houses and sells them.

Lawyers say the builder committed no legal crime. If he ever comes back, he can be sued. But "it is not a crime to owe money."

This is an ingenious, unusual and extreme case, but it illustrates the point.

You can't always tell what's in a name, but anyway Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya (bless him for that "T."(was keynoter at the opening of the Toronto Exposition, and is said to have cast a spell over his audience.

There seems to be some question as to which are more help to a lady swimmer—tugs or children.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Fifth avenue and Broadway are a parade ground for an almost constant procession of the oddly dressed. Some are seekers of publicity and others are merely harmless and often half-cracked.

Mumbling Moe has for many years roamed the avenue curbs salvaging pins from the gutters. He has a straggly beard and in all seasons wears a half dozen overcoats, the outer one of which is decorated with the products of his search.

The gray derbied twins are crisp, elderly gentlemen—alike as two peas—who usually emerge from Central Park in the late afternoon and stroll as far south as the Waldorf. They have a Brummelish flair, austere dignity and are apparently oblivious of pedestrianic gazing.

Lower Fifth avenue offers two women in black who promenade at dusk. They walk on opposite sides of the street and apparently try to keep in step. They are doubtless slightly mad. When they reach a certain corner they exchange signals and scuttle out side streets.

In Times Square almost daily appears a former pugilist, also mildly touched, who shadow boxes with an imaginary foe on the sidewalk and when a crowd collects sings a song and vanishes. Police do not bother him. If the crowd grows too big they merely wave him away. He is a drug addict.

In the same district is a hatless man who carries an alpenstock and now and then stops to yodel. Also a man who wears a green derby and white spats and passes out little printed cards with the meaningless twaddle: "Life is logical but mediocre."

Nearly every public park has its bird man or woman—strange, silent figures who appear daily to feed the birds and resent attempts at conversation. Night also brings out its fleeting characters who stand knee deep in the shadows of big buildins—alone and apparently desperately afraid of the light.

Evidently those youths who have taken to the new horn-rimmed spectacles with square eyeglasses are not considered harmless cranks. But bright young men.

I wish something could be done about those stage Rubes who drawl "I swan!" I never heard a farmer use the expression and the only person I ever heard say "By heck!" was a sophisticated soda jerker in a 42nd street drug store.

The New York theatre galleries have lost their glamour. They are no longer known as "Nigger Heaven." In days when tumultous drama was served hot the gallery was infinitely more interesting than the orchestra circle. Patrons came early, shouted burly epithets, bought peanuts, popcorn and lemonade from a candy butcher and milled about in easy familiarity until the head usher rapped and shouted "Hats off!" for the opening overture. There were critics in the gallery whose noisy methods often made or broke a show. The best actors recognized the value of loft approval so much that "a play to the gallery" became a part of the language. Today the galleries are sprinkled with a light attendance. Frugal and prim ladies go there as do undemonstrative middle-aged men. But noisy youth is gone. If they cannot sit in first class seats they go to the movies.

A cafe near the Coentes Slip offers fried seagull's eggs. And a Chinese place on Broadway has jellied bear meat.

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Change in Road Building.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—For a century and a half or more vehicular construction in this country adjusted itself to meet road and highway conditions. Those who built carts, wagons, coaches, buggies, and, latterly, automobiles, concerned themselves primarily with turning out vehicles that could negotiate roads of the type then in existence or being constructed.

The humble ox-cart was not designed for comfort, speed, or beauty, but to carry a load wherever an ox could walk, road or no road. The carriage or coach of state of the type with which visitors to Mount Vernon are familiar was not given its elaborate system of springs out of excessive concern for the comfort of those who rode in it, but because without such springs the highways of those days would have jolted and racked it to ruin in a single journey. Nor was it built to be drawn by four or six horses to insure traveling at high speed, but to make sure that it would have sufficient motive power to make the grades, the ruts, and the mudholes it would encounter.

The prairie schooner or covered wagon in which the pioneers conquered the plains and dared the hazards of dizzy mountain trails and treacherous fords was constructed to combat precisely those conditions, carrying the maximum road.

And once the era of automotive transportation arrived, motor-vehicles, after their early crudities were eliminated, have been developed to conform to the requirements of the streets and roads over which they were expected to travel, always with the idea of making the best of a bad situation in that respect. Now, however, experts say the trend is the other way. Roads and streets of the future are being constructed or projected to conform to vehicular requirements.

"Automobiles have been revamped annually to meet the conditions imposed upon them by the highways," says William Ullman, contributing editor of the American Motorist. "Steep grades brought about the super-power engine, while shell holes hastened the adoption of the balloon tire, with an endless variety of shock absorbers and fitments designed to ease the shocks.

"The modern motor car is the result of an antiquated type of highway and much that has happened in automobile engineering is a direct consequence of what hasn't happened in road building. But after all these years, some one has found the reverse gear of this situation and decided to experiment with it. As a result, modern roads are being built to fit the automobile."

The One-Way Highway.

One great advance immediately at hand, as seen by this authority, is the conversion of road-builders to the idead that all main-traveled thoroughfares should be one-way highways. He points out that one of the most serious obstacles to faster and safer night driving is not so much the deficiencies of headlights but the essential fallacy of building two-way highways. So long as cars meet on what is virtually one track the element of hazard will remain exceedingly high and no amount of mechanical improvement in cars is going to compensate for this basic error.

And of course the hazards of the two-way road are there by day as well as by night. Speeding, careless driving, and hogging the road will result in numerous accidents just as long as cars must travel in opposite directions in the same roadway. Widening roadbeds has tended somewhat to improve traffic conditions in this respect, but with the wider roads and traffic congestion there comes inevitably the double line of cars in either direction and the hazards are increased rather than reduced.

There will be accidents in one-way highways, to be sure, due to rear-end collisions, the side-swiping of one car by another that is passing it while going in the same direction, and the like, but they will be reduced to a minimum.

The Roosevelt Boulevard, an important link in the Lincoln Highway, is cited as an interesting example of the one-way highway of the future. It runs from North Philadelphia for a number of miles toward Trenton, New Jersey, and in several of its sections is divided into two roadways, one for north-bound and the other for south-bound vehicles, by a narrow strip of parkway. At places a wider two-way road comes between the one-way courses, but it has been found that a large percentage of drivers prefer the one-way courses. This is especially true in relation to night-time driving, for motorists are quick to take advantage of any opportunity to avoid the menace of meeting and passing a car with the glaring, blinding headlights.

Where it is found that traffic demands necessitate the widening of improved roads, highway commissioners are considering the idea of building a new, parallel road instead, with the new road to take care of the traffic in one direction while the old one is used exclusively for traffic in the other direction. An illustration of this is the present agitation of the idea of adopting this policy in dealing with traffic requirements on the direct road between Washington and Baltimore.

Eliminating the Crown.

Until recently practically all roads were constructed with a crown which was regarded as essential for drainage purposes. But the crown, especially a sharp one on a narrow roadway, was discovered to be a bad thing for automotive traffic and it is being rapidly eliminated. Roadways have been and are being flattened out until the shoulders are as high as the center.

"Without a crown," says Mr. Ullman, "a road spares the automobile the throwing of oil over the right rear brake band, a condition that was quite common when cars ran along for miles in a tilted position and with differential oil flowing in excess to the right. In addition, there is far less wear on the front tire of a car for the reason that the wheel is not continually 'climbing' out of the ditch, and, spared the crown, the car can operate at a more efficient speed. The driver is given better control over his car and is less likely to be caught off his guard driving in the center of the road when another car is approaching."

Another significant development in highway building is the reduction of grades. Automobiles were designed and turned out that would take almost any kind of a hill or mountain in "high," and motorists insisted on having that kind of engine in their

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE CANDIDATE.

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theatres, she reached a small town in Texas, and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m.

When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offen whose haid? "Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offen mah haid, let along it's some stranger!"

CELLARS FILLED BY RAIN STORM

The work and labor of almost two weeks, spent by the service department in erasing the marks of the rain storm that broke through McQueen's Run sewer, was practically wiped away Saturday night when a near deluge again partially inundated the west end of the city between Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets.

A several hours' terrific downpour covered the Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car and other traffic as the water backed up Commerce to as far as Fourteenth street.

Mayor W. L. Fogo and city employes were on the job early Sunday morning following the rain and succeeded in draining the water away.

WOMAN SHERIFF JAILS MAN WHO KILLED SEVEN

Arkansas Slayer Gets Thrill by Surrendering.

NEVER CAPTURED

"Never Did Any Low-down Thing Like Stealing."

TEXARKANA, Ark.—"I just wanted a new thrill. So I surrendered to a woman sheriff."

Bennie Wagner, 23, slayer of seven men, in his cell at the local jail told why he gave himself up to Sheriff (Mrs.) Lillie Barber after killing a couple of men here a few days ago.

Thrills are scarce to a killer kid who kills a man every two months for a year. It is much more a novelty to surrender to a woman sheriff than to kill a couple of men. So Bennie will tell you.

"I can say one thing truthfully," said Bennie, "I have never been captured." "I have never done any low-down things either, like stealing."

"I started from my home over in Gates City, Va., about two years ago with a circus. I quit the show down in Mississippi.

"I was framed, and arrested for stealing a watch. I never stole anything in my life and told the sheriff so. But he kept laughing at me and telling me how many years I was going to get."

"I told the sheriff I would run over him and escape. He laughed again. So I did. A deputy sheriff grabbed a shotgun and pointed it at me. I took the sheriff's pistol and killed the deputy."

"I had learned trick shooting from the circus and can shoot objects in the air as fast as you can toss them up. I never miss."

"I went back home and waited for things to quiet down. One day I went over in Tennessee and two men deliberately started shooting at me. So I kelled 'em both. I beat it and later learned they were officers and knew who I was."

"An old woman friend of my family persuaded me to surrender and several days later I did."

"I was tried and sentenced to the electric chair. My lawyer asked for a new trial and got it."

"I got tired of being in jail so I just broke out. Two guards were shooting at me. I turned around and killed one of them and started running. I shot the other one over my left shoulder while running. He was killed, too.

"I went to Texas and rambled around a bit. Later I came here and started working on a farm. The other day the Carper boys started to beat me up with a single tree. I was their friend and told them not to hit me again. They laughed and kept beating me."

"So I took my pistol and killed 'em. I would have killed that other fellow I shot but it was too dark to see and aim straight. I would never have been caught. Two days later I heard there was a woman sheriff here trying to make good in her husband's place. Her husband was killed, awhile back, I heard."

This, in brief, is what a desperate gunman, slayer of seven, has to say and he wasn't disappointed with the thrill he expected in surrendering to a woman.

For six years Miss Palmer and Brewster have been "engaged" but Mrs. Eleanor Brewster has prevented a divorce action which would make their marriage possible. Now Brewster has found a Mexican city where divorces are granted "without grounds." Immediately after the divorce is obtained, beauty and publisher will be wed. Her Tragic Mistake

THOSE who knew her would have said: "Such things don't happen to girls like Marion." She was well-educated; she had high ideals; her every thought and word were refinement itself. Yet, she was to find herself subject to the same vicissitudes of Fate that pursue all who blindly try to make right out of wrong.

It all started when she met and fell in love with Terry Dixon, who had twice been engaged to the mad-cap heiress, Helen Carlson, but who swore to Marion that his love for Helen was dead.

But often it is the unexpected that shapes human destiny.

For, having been forced by a terrible storm to seek refuge in a lonely cabin, she had scarcely crossed the threshold with Terry when she found she had taken the first step into a world of terror, desperate conflict and hideous peril.

What she went through is told by Marion herself in "Out of the Storm," in True Story Magazine for October. Don't miss this thrilling, soul-stirring, true-life narrative.

"The house was large and lonely. I was frightened. Terry had called, and I had just answered, when there came a terrific crash, and—"

Finds True Story A Great Help

Dear Sir:

Being a minister of the Gospel, I find True Story a help in warning young people against the trials and temptations of life. If more mothers would provide this magazine for their girls to read we ministers would hear less of the sad stories of fallen girls. May God bless you in your work of helping the young by warning them of the dangers in life. If this is worth anything to you in carrying on the work, I give you permission to use this in any way you see fit. Best wishes for your continued success.

Yours very truly,
(Rev.) C. P. CHEWNING

FOR Acid Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug-store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

POLICE RAID EIGHT PLACES

Frank Fusci and Bernard Taylor Held for Hearings.

Two arrests on possession charges and three for intoxication represent activities of local police during the week-end and Monday holiday.

Frank Fusci, charged with possession, was arrested at his place near Fourteenth and Main streets by Chief Fultz and Patrolman Pugh Saturday night. He is slated for a hearing this evening.

Bernard Taylor, arrested in Twelfth street by Fultz and Pugh on a similar charge, will face Mayor W. L. Fogo Thursday night, according to present arrangements. Beer seized by police in the raid will be analyzed by City Chemist Jess Tarr.

William Hanna, Charles Thompson and Harve Sheckler were picked up by Patrolman Pugh and Cole on charges of intoxication. Hanna was ordered to leave town.

Police raided eight places Saturday on liquor warrents and made arrests at two places—Fusci's and Taylor's. Two other places in Main street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, were notified to close up by Chief Fultz, who threatens to "padlock" the places if the orders are not complied with.

Owners of the property have also been notified of the police action.

CELLARS FILLED BY RAIN STORM

The work and labor of almost two weeks, spent by the service department in erasing the marks of the rain storm that broke through McQueen's Run sewer, was practically wiped away Saturday night when a near deluge again partially inundated the west end of the city between Fourteenth and Eighteenth streets.

A several hours' terrific downpour covered the Seventeenth and Commerce street intersection to a depth of approximately three feet, halting street car and other traffic as the water backed up Commerce to as far as Fourteenth street.

Cellars of several scores of homes in the district were flooded.

Mayor W. L. Fogo and city employes were on the job early Sunday morning following the rain and succeeded in draining the water away.

The mud coating on the several streets which were inundated will be removed this week.

WOMAN SHERIFF JAILS MAN WHO KILLED SEVEN

Arkansas Slayer Gets Thrill by Surrendering.

NEVER CAPTURED

"Never Did Any Low-down Thing Like Stealing."

TEXARKANA, Ark.—"I just wanted a new thrill. So I surrendered to a woman sheriff."

Bennie Wagner, 23, slayer of seven men, in his cell at the local jail told why he gave himself up to Sheriff (Mrs.) Lillie Barber after killing a couple of men here a few days ago.

Thrills are scarce to a killer kid who kills a man every two months for a year. It is much more a novelty to surrender to a woman sheriff than to kill a couple of men. So Bennie will tell you.

"I can say one thing truthfully," said Bennie, "I have never been captured." "I have never done any low-down things either, like stealing."

"I started from my home over in Gates City, Va., about two years ago with a circus. I quit the show down in Mississippi.

"I was framed, and arrested for stealing a watch. I never stole anything in my life and told the sheriff so. But he kept laughing at me and telling me how many years I was going to get."

"I told the sheriff I would run over him and escape. He laughed again. So I did. A deputy sheriff grabbed a shotgun and pointed it at me. I took the sheriff's pistol and killed the deputy."

"I had learned trick shooting from the circus and can shoot objects in the air as fast as you can toss them up. I never miss."

"I went back home and waited for things to quiet down. One day I went over in Tennessee and two men deliberately started shooting at me. So I kelled 'em both. I beat it and later learned they were officers and knew who I was."

"An old woman friend of my family persuaded me to surrender and several days later I did."

"I was tried and sentenced to the electric chair. My lawyer asked for a new trial and got it."

"I got tired of being in jail so I just broke out. Two guards were shooting at me. I turned around and killed one of them and started running. I shot the other one over my left shoulder while running. He was killed, too.

"I went to Texas and rambled around a bit. Later I came here and started working on a farm. The other day the Carper boys started to beat me up with a single tree. I was their friend and told them not to hit me again. They laughed and kept beating me."

"So I took my pistol and killed 'em. I would have killed that other fellow I shot but it was too dark to see and aim straight. I would never have been caught. Two days later I hear there was a woman sheriff here trying to make good in her husband's place. Her husband was killed, awhile back, I heard."

This, in brief, is what a desperate gunman, slayer of seven, has to say and he wasn't disappointed with the thrill he expected in surrendering to a woman.

A standard motor fuel for France is being proposed.

MEXICAN DIVORCE "PARADISE" SOLVES PALMER-BREWSTER ROMANCE ISSUE

Corliss Palmer, whose beauty won for her a prize from one of the magazines published by Eugene V. Brewster, is to be married to the wealthy publisher on or about Thanksgiving. For six years Miss Palmer and Brewster have been "engaged" but Mrs. Eleanor Brewster has prevented a divorce action which would make their marriage possible. Now Brewster has found a Mexican city where divorces are granted "without grounds." Immediately after the divorce is obtained, beauty and publisher will be wed. Large photo is of Corliss Palmer, insets of Brewster and Mrs. Brewster.

TYPHOID FEVER EPIDEMIC HITS WELLINGTON, O.

Council Acts as Known Cases Increase to to 60.

TWO PERSONS DIE

Emergency Ordinance Calls for Pasteurization of Milk.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 7.—Two representatives of the state health department left here today for Wellington, Ohio, and Marion and Fulton counties, where many cases of typhoid fever have developed. Dr. T. W. Mahoney was sent to Wellington where 52 have been reported. Dr. R. B. Tate went to Fulton and Marion counties where at least a dozen scattered cases have developed, according to Dr. C. P. Robbins.

Dr. Robbins expressed concern over the situation in Wellington and declared it may be 10 days before the source of the disease is reached. He declared it has been spread along a milkman's route. The milk distributor gathers milk and cream from five farmers, he said.

WELLINGTON, O., Sept. 7.—With another death, the second within a week, and the increase of known cases to 60, the city council today ordered emergency regulations in an effort to curb the ravages of the typhoid fever epidemic which began two weeks ago.

Mrs. Frances Kimmerling, 26, died of the disease Sunday and former Mayor Guy Wells, is reported in a serious condition. His wife and son became afflicted with the fever several days ago.

& Emergency ordinances passed by the council, provided that all milk must be pasteurized but as only one plant is equipped with the sanitary system other dairies have been allowed two days to install machinery. The plant now pasteurizing milk cannot furnish an adequate supply for the city.

Although the number of patients suffering from the disease had doubled within the last week, local health authorities hope that the epidemic has been checked, although they expect additional cases to be reported for another day or two.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—After a firm opening, in which the railroad, equipment, oils and a few of the utility stocks registered moderate gains, the stock market developed an irregular trend in early trading today. Heavy offerings of the market leaders made it impossible for them to make further upward progress, and in many cases they fell back to below the level of last Friday's closing prices.

There was no indication that bullish interests in the railroad stocks would continue the broad advance in prices, though New York Central was well bought above 147.

The rise in oil stocks, which carried the leading independent oils to fractionally higher prices, was based on the report of declining production in California and Texas, and the firm market for oil products. Atlantic Refining was a leader in this group, with Marland, Phillips, Pan American and Sinclair responding promptly to more aggressive buying.

Issues in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—Prohibition and the world court were the out standing issues before voters as they marched to the polls in the Wisconsin primary election today.

The contest that holds the center of interest is between Senator Irvine L. Lenroot and Gov. John J. Blaine for the Republican senatorial nomination.

For the past half dozen years the LaFollette faction has been out "to get" Lenroot. Gov. Blaine is leader of that faction. It is the consensus among political seers that the Blaine-Lenroot contest will be close, with the outtcome unknown until all votes are counted.

Blaine is said in some quarters to have the edge over Lenroot because of the efficiency of his well-oiled state machine. Wisconsin is anti-world court and wet, according to all surface indications.

Lenroot is a sponsor of the world court. He has strong women's organizations over the state working for him. Their support is expected to counteract much of the influence of the well organized Blaine machine.

A vote in excess of 400,000 is predicted today on the basis of favorable weather.

Heavy Voting in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 7.—Heavy voting marked progress today in the primary election in New Hampshire.

In the race for the United States senate, three Republicans were running. Senator George H. Moses was opposed by former Governor Robert B. Bass and Judge James W. Remick.

Huntley N. Spaulding was opposing Governor John G. Winant in the Republican gubernatorial contest.

In the Democratic primary, Robert C. Murchie, Concord, in the fight for the United States senatorial nomination was opposed by Albert W. Noone, Peterboro.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Mayor Eaton D. Sargent, Nashua, was unopposed.

F. Clyde Keefe, of Dover, opposed Ferdinand Farley, of Manchester, for the Democratic nomination in the first congressional district and Congressman Fletcher Hale was unopposed in the Republican primary in that district.

There were no contests in the second congressional district. Congressman Edward H. Wason ran alone on the Republican side and George H. Duncan, of New Jersey, on the Democratic side.

IRISH VILLAGE MOVIE HOUSE FIRE TOLL 51

10 ARE MISSING

Owner and Operator of Picture Machine are Detained.

DRUMCOLLIHER, Ireland, Sept. 7.—Deadly silence prevails in this stricken village, broken only by the tramp of feet, sobs and an occasional hysterical shriek as attempts are made to identify the dead of the disastrous fire in the improvised picture theatre here.

The charred remains of 48 bodies lie in coffins in houses and stores and all day a continual procession of relatives and friends filed before these bodies striving to identify them from rosaries or trinkets which were found upon them.

Thus far only six of the 48 bodies have been identified.

Priests are conducting a census of the village and its environs striving to determine definitely who is among the dead.

Propose Communal Grave.

President Cosgrove arrived here today from Dublin and immediately went to the tiny village church where he heard a requiem mass for the victims of the disaster.

Evidence brought out at the coroner's inquest disclosed the absence of precautionary measures in connection with the establishment of the improvised motion picture theatre.

Ford, the owner of the theatre, and Dowling, the motion picture operator, were held in custody during a week's adjournment of the inquest.

Numerous children who are motherless due to the disaster, continue to roam the streets of the village weeping and praying and refusing to be consoled.

LIMERICK, Sept. 7.—The little village of Drumcolliher, county of Limerick, was a vale of tears today.

Hardly a soul in the town but numbers one of more among the 51 men, women and children who perished when fire swept through a loft where a moving picture entertainment was being held.

Practically the entire populace was occupied this morning in seeking to identify their loved ones among the bodies, or in making preparations for their burial. Some of the victims are so badly burned as to defy identification. These, it is understood, will all be buried together.

Between 15 and 20 children are among the dead, and it is reported 10 persons are still unaccounted for, so that the death toll may reach 60.

Drumcolliher's one street was thronged with weeping men and women. All ploces of business were closed. Relief workers from Limerick, Cork and Dublin were endeavoring to provide for families of the victims. Physicians were working to save the lives of the injured, many of whom are in a critical condition from burns and gas fumes.

Intense public feeling was directed against a man named Ford, owner of the moving picture machine, the faulty operation of which led to the fire.

Ford's house was stoned last night and all the windows broken. Local police placed Ford under arrest for his own safety and pending an oficial inquiry into the cause of the disaster. The operator of the machine, Downey, is also being detained.

LIQUOR BLAMED FOR TRAGEDY

Ohio Farmer Kills Child and Wounds Wife.

BATAVIA, O., Sept. 7.—The ghost of another family tragedy stalked the hills of Clermont county today. It was the fourth of the summer.

And with John Weber, 45, a Hungarian farmer, in jail, here, awaiting a murder charge; his youngest child dead and his wife in a serious condition in a hospital, jealousy and bad moonshine has triumphed again, according to Sheriff Fred Croswell.

Weber shot at his wife with a shotgun as she stood holding the 18 months' old child. The child was killed instantly. There are four other children.

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 7.—Facing a first degree murder charge, Mrs. Mabel Graham, 27, formerly of this city, but for the past two years living in Canton, O., sat in the Brooke county jail here today. She was alleged to have shot her husband, Albert, 33, as they rode in an automobile on the Bethany pike, near here.

The young woman denied firing the shot with intent to kill her husband, saying she intended to commit suicide, because he refused to go back to Canton with her, and that the gun was accidentally discharged when the automobile went into a ditch.

Graham left Canton Monday morning, according to his widow, and came here to look for work, she followed in the afternoon and they met at a tourists' camp, near town. She got into the automobile with him and they drove away. She admitted to Prosecutor Wilkins they quarreled and that she produced the gun. In trying to prevent her from ending her life, her husband lost control of the car, she said. As it plunged into a ditch, the gun was fired and Graham was instantly killed.

H. M. DAUGHERTY GOES ON TRIAL IN NEW YORK

Former Cabinet Member is Charged With Accepting Bribe.

MILLER ACCUSED

Two Others Indicted in American Metals Case are Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—For the first time in history a former member of a presidential cabinet goes on trial today. He is Harry M. Daughetry, attorney general of the United States in the Harding administration. He is charged with accepting a bribe of $441,000.

On trial with Daugherty will be Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian in the same administration. He also is charged with receiving a bribe.

These two, with two others, are accused of accepting $50,000 in cash and $391,000 in Liberty bonds for returning to German owners of the American Metals company $6,453,979, realized from sale of the stock of the company after it had been seized in the war.

The two indicted with Daugherty and Miller are dead. One was John T. King, Republican dictator of Bridgeport., Conn., and the other was Jess W. Smith, Daughterty's shadow and apartment mate.

Smith killed himself in 1923.

Trial Before Federal Jury.

After many legal battles to keep the case from trial, it opens before Judge Julian W. Mack and a jury in federal court here today. It is tried in New York because, it is alleged, the bribe was paid here on October 1, 1921. It is expected that the first day will be consumed in selecting a jury.

The indictment alleges that Daugherty and Miller turned the $6,453,979 over to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs De Metaux without investigating the validity of that firm's claims to the funds.

The American Metals company, owned by Germans, was impounded during the war by A. Michell Palmer, alien property custodian. Its stock was sold and the proceeds were deposited in the treasury.

Immediately after the Harding administration came in Daugherty and Miller were appointed to their offices. Six months later, it is said, they accepted the bribe.

According to the indictment, Richard Merton, one of the orginal German owners, paid the $411,000 to the government officials for their services in restoring the property to alien hands.

TURKEY SEEKS LEAGUE SEAT

Spectre of Soviet Russia Also Looms at Geneva.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—With Turkey knocking at the door of the League of Nations, the spectre of soviet Russia is looming once more at Geneva.

Through Munir Bey, its representative at Berne, Turkey has indicated at several capitals its desire to join the league provided it receives assurance of a seat in the council.

Great Britain, through diplomatic channels, has informed Turkey that an essential preliminary condition to her acceptance by the league is the revision of the Russo-Turkish treaty, particularly the neutrality clause which provides that Turkey remain neutral if Russia becomes involved in war, even though Russia be the aggressor, and vice-versa.

Great Britain contends that this clause violates the league covenant, inasmuch as if Russia should attack a member of the league, Turkey, as all other members, would be obligated to take measures against Russia.

Officials Seek Mazer

today with the return of United States Attorney A. E. Bernsteen from his vacation.

The first move will be the recommendation to the United States attorney general that Louis Mazer, one of the three named in the murder indictment be returned to Canton for arraignment.

This recommendation will be made, Bernsteen said, in view of the fact that Mazer is held here on a liquor conspiracy charge brought by federal authorities, and proper procedure specified that he be released to Stark county authorities by order of the United States attorney general only.

It was learned that a deputy sheriff from Canton was en route to Bernsteen's office to arrange for Mazer's release to Stark county authorities.

Although he will not be permitted to return with Mazer today, Stark county authorities will be duly notified when the release is issued by the attorney general, Bernsteen said.

Plan to Grill Mazer.

The second step will be the grilling of Mazer today by Bernsteen in an effort to break through Mazer's hitherto impenetrable reserve regarding the murder and his reiterations of innocence.

Further evidence in the slaying and those connected with it, which has so far not been revealed is expected to be secured by Bernsteen through the squad of federal dry and narcotic operatives thrown into the field by him, and given orders to delve into vice conditions as they exist in Canton.

A round-up of federal law violators is expected by the end of the week, it was learned from an official source.

Statements taken from those arrested will probably bring to light evidence regarding the identity of the trigger-man in the murder, "together with the evidence about the higher-ups," which has not been revealed heretofore, the fighting district attorney said.

A detailed report of operations of federal agents in Canton and vicinity together with his own deductions concerning the Mellett murder was being prepared today by Howell Leuck, assistant United States district attorney who was placed in charge of the federal probe by Bernsteen.

Clean Up Looms.

"There will be some pretty big boys enmeshed in our net when we get through investigating the wholesale rum ring down there," Leuck said.

"We have the dope on them and no matter what they do or how they squirm they won't wriggle off our hook," he added.

Joseph R. Roach, vice fighting Chicago attorney who handled the investigation of the Mellett murder, and is now in Chicago, is expected to confer with Bernsteen about Sept. 16, when he will lay evidence regarding the criminal activities of the "higher-ups" which may result in the federal grand jury returning indictments.

vised coal fires were used as the people breakfasted.

The city went without fuel until 10:30 o'clock last night when a temporary line was laid by the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co., furnishing gas from the Steubenville end.

One of the breaks occured under stress of a slip in the west end of Wellsville and the other, of undetermined cause, occurred in the east end of the city, in the river. A gas company diver arrived here today and will go after the leak as soon as the current in the river abates.

Veritable torrents of water poured over the East Liverpool-Wellsville road during the heaviest storm. The highway bore every resemblance of a millrace, water running curb deep from Walker's to Brady's cut.

Rocks On Roadway.

FOR Acid Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

If Tired, Worn-Out, and Run-Down Regain Vigor Thru Gland Treatment

Gland secretions are called hormones—mysterious messengers which Science has discovered exert a remarkable influence on health, strength and vitality.

When the glands function normally, they supply these vitalizing hormones (or secretions) which are essential to physical well-being. And when the glands fail to function, health fails.

Now, glandular treatment, which is indorsed by eminent scientists and physicians of this country and Europe, is being used by thousands of men and women to help overcome a weakened, worn-out, run-down, exhausted condition and to regain the strength, vigor and vitality that are the natural benefits resulting from a normal glandular system.

Glandogen, the new scientific gland tonic, provides a simple method of taking glandular treatment. Glandogen is prepared in convenient tablet form, for both men and women. Accept no substitutes, insist on genuine Glandogen, the original gland tonic Mathews Cut Rate Store will supply you.

Runs Many Big Game Hazards; Is Run Down by B'way Flivver

Lola Kreutzberg, pictured here with one of her mascots, a full-grown leopard, has taken just about every risk in the catalogue of explorers' and hunters' risks. She has just returned from an expedition into the heart of Sumatra, where she ran unusual hazards, but, safely back in America, she finds Broadway, N. Y., too much for her. A flivver shied into her; she is now nursing a broken leg and a variety of lesser injuries.

TYPHOID FEVER EPIDEMIC HITS WELLINGTON, O.

Emergency Ordinance Calls for Pasteurization of Milk.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 7.—Two representatives of the state health department left here today for Wellington, Ohio, and Marion and Fulton counties, where many cases of typhoid fever have developed. Dr. T. W. Mahoney was sent to Wellington where 52 have been reported. Dr. R. B. Tate went to Fulton and Marion counties where at least a dozen scattered cases have developed, according to Dr. C. P. Robbins.

Dr. Robbins expressed concern over the situation in Wellington and declared it may be 10 days before the source of the disease is reached. He declared it has been spread along a milkman's route. The milk distributor gathers milk and cream from five farmers, he said.

WELLINGTON, O., Sept. 7.—With another death, the second within a week, and the increase of known cases to 60, the city council today ordered emergency regulations in an effort to curb the ravages of the typhoid fever epidemic which began two weeks ago.

Mrs. Frances Kimmerling, 26, died of the disease Sunday and former Mayor Guy Wells, is reported in a serious condition. His wife and son became afflicted with the fever several days ago.

& Emergency ordinances passed by the council, provided that all milk must be pasteurized but as only one plant is equipped with the sanitary system other dairies have been allowed two days to install machinery. The plant now pasteurizing milk cannot furnish an adequate supply for the city.

Although the number of patients suffering from the disease had doubled within the last week, local health authorities hope that the epidemic has been checked, although they expect additional cases to be reported for another day or two.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—After a firm opening, in which the railroad, equipment, oils and a few of the utility stocks registered moderate gains, the stock market developed an irregular trend in early trading today. Heavy offerings of the market leaders made it impossible for them to make further upward progress, and in many cases they fell back to below the level of last Friday's closing prices.

There was no indication that bullish interests in the railroad stocks would continue the broad advance in prices, though New York Central was well bought above 147.

The rise in oil stocks, which carried the leading independent oils to fractionally higher prices, was based on the report of declining production in California and Texas, and the firm market for oil products. Atlantic Refining was a leader in this group, with Marland, Phillips, Pan American and Sinclair responding promptly to more aggressive buying.

H. P. VINCENT ROTARY GUEST

R. Thomas & Sons Company Official Makes Address.

President Thompson also announced that Steubenville Rotarians would be guests of the local club members at a ladies' night party to be given at the Country club Tuesday evening, September 28. Local Rotarians will go to Youngstown on Friday, October 1, for a golf tournament with members of the Youngstown club.

Issues in Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 7.—Prohibition and the world court were the out standing issues before voters as they marched to the polls in the Wisconsin primary election today.

The contest that holds the center of interest is between Senator Irvine L. Lenroot and Gov. John J. Blaine for the Republican senatorial nomination.

For the past half dozen years the LaFollette faction has been out "to get" Lenroot. Gov. Blaine is leader of that faction. It is the consensus among political seers that the Blaine-Lenroot contest will be close, with the outtcome unknown until all votes are counted.

Blaine is said in some quarters to have the edge over Lenroot because of the efficiency of his well-oiled state machine. Wisconsin is anti-world court and wet, according to all surface indications.

Lenroot is a sponsor of the world court. He has strong women's organizations over the state working for him. Their support is expected to counteract much of the influence of the well organized Blaine machine.

A vote in excess of 400,000 is predicted today on the basis of favorable weather.

Heavy Voting in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 7.—Heavy voting marked progress today in the primary election in New Hampshire.

In the race for the United States senate, three Republicans were running. Senator George H. Moses was opposed by former Governor Robert B. Bass and Judge James W. Remick.

Huntley N. Spaulding was opposing Governor John G. Winant in the Republican gubernatorial contest.

In the Democratic primary, Robert C. Murchie, Concord, in the fight for the United States senatorial nomination was opposed by Albert W. Noone, Peterboro.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Mayor Eaton D. Sargent, Nashua, was unopposed.

F. Clyde Keefe, of Dover, opposed Ferdinand Farley, of Manchester, for the Democratic nomination in the first congressional district and Congressman Fletcher Hale was unopposed in the Republican primary in that district.

There were no contests in the second congressional district. Congressman Edward H. Wason ran alone on the Republican side and George H. Duncan, of New Jersey, on the Democratic side.

IRISH VILLAGE MOVIE HOUSE FIRE TOLL 51

10 ARE MISSING

Owner and Operator of Picture Machine are Detained.

DRUMCOLLIHER, Ireland, Sept. 7.—Deadly silence prevails in this stricken village, broken only by the tramp of feet, sobs and an occasional hysterical shriek as attempts are made to identify the dead of the disastrous fire in the improvised picture theatre here.

The charred remains of 48 bodies lie in coffins in houses and stores and all day a continual procession of relatives and friends filed before these bodies striving to identify them from rosaries or trinkets which were found upon them.

Thus far only six of the 48 bodies have been identified.

Priests are conducting a census of the village and its environs striving to determine definitely who is among the dead.

Propose Communal Grave.

President Cosgrove arrived here today from Dublin and immediately went to the tiny village church where he heard a requiem mass for the victims of the disaster.

Evidence brought out at the coroner's inquest disclosed the absence of precautionary measures in connection with the establishment of the improvised motion picture theatre.

Ford, the owner of the theatre, and Dowling, the motion picture operator, were held in custody during a week's adjournment of the inquest.

Numerous children who are motherless due to the disaster, continue to roam the streets of the village weeping and praying and refusing to be consoled.

LIMERICK, Sept. 7.—The little village of Drumcolliher, county of Limerick, was a vale of tears today.

Hardly a soul in the town but numbers one of more among the 51 men, women and children who perished when fire swept through a loft where a moving picture entertainment was being held.

Practically the entire populace was occupied this morning in seeking to identify their loved ones among the bodies, or in making preparations for their burial. Some of the victims are so badly burned as to defy identification. These, it is understood, will all be buried together.

Between 15 and 20 children are among the dead, and it is reported 10 persons are still unaccounted for, so that the death toll may reach 60.

Drumcolliher's one street was thronged with weeping men and women. All ploces of business were closed. Relief workers from Limerick, Cork and Dublin were endeavoring to provide for families of the victims. Physicians were working to save the lives of the injured, many of whom are in a critical condition from burns and gas fumes.

Intense public feeling was directed against a man named Ford, owner of the moving picture machine, the faulty operation of which led to the fire.

Ford's house was stoned last night and all the windows broken. Local police placed Ford under arrest for his own safety and pending an oficial inquiry into the cause of the disaster. The operator of the machine, Downey, is also being detained.

LIQUOR BLAMED FOR TRAGEDY

Ohio Farmer Kills Child and Wounds Wife.

BATAVIA, O., Sept. 7.—The ghost of another family tragedy stalked the hills of Clermont county today. It was the fourth of the summer.

And with John Weber, 45, a Hungarian farmer, in jail, here, awaiting a murder charge; his youngest child dead and his wife in a serious condition in a hospital, jealousy and bad moonshine has triumphed again, according to Sheriff Fred Croswell.

Weber made a sworn statement confessing the crime, committed yesterday afternoon the sheriff said, and declared he was "ready to go to the electric chair."

Weber shot at his wife with a shotgun as she stood holding the 18 months' old child. The child was killed instantly. There are four other children.

Woman is Arrested For Murder as Shot Kills Her Husband

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 7.—Facing a first degree murder charge, Mrs. Mabel Graham, 27, formerly of this city, but for the past two years living in Canton, O., sat in the Brooke county jail here today. She was alleged to have shot her husband, Albert, 33, as they rode in an automobile on the Bethany pike, near here.

The young woman denied firing the shot with intent to kill her husband, saying she intended to commit suicide, because he refused to go back to Canton with her, and that the gun was accidentally discharged when the automobile went into a ditch.

Graham left Canton Monday morning, according to his widow, and came here to look for work, she followed in the afternoon and they met at a tourists' camp, near town. She got into the automobile with him and they drove away. She admitted to Prosecutor Wilkins they quarreled and that she produced the gun. In trying to prevent her from ending her life, her husband lost control of the car, she said. As it plunged into a ditch, the gun was fired and Graham was instantly killed.

H. M. DAUGHERTY GOES ON TRIAL IN NEW YORK

Former Cabinet Member is Charged With Accepting Bribe.

MILLER ACCUSED

Two Others Indicted in American Metals Case are Dead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—For the first time in history a former member of a presidential cabinet goes on trial today. He is Harry M. Daughetry, attorney general of the United States in the Harding administration. He is charged with accepting a bribe of $441,000.

On trial with Daugherty will be Colonel Thomas W. Miller, alien property custodian in the same administration. He also is charged with receiving a bribe.

These two, with two others, are accused of accepting $50,000 in cash and $391,000 in Liberty bonds for returning to German owners of the American Metals company $6,453,979, realized from sale of the stock of the company after it had been seized in the war.

The two indicted with Daugherty and Miller are dead. One was John T. King, Republican dictator of Bridgeport., Conn., and the other was Jess W. Smith, Daughterty's shadow and apartment mate.

Smith killed himself in 1923.

Trial Before Federal Jury.

After many legal battles to keep the case from trial, it opens before Judge Julian W. Mack and a jury in federal court here today. It is tried in New York because, it is alleged, the bribe was paid here on October 1, 1921. It is expected that the first day will be consumed in selecting a jury.

The indictment alleges that Daugherty and Miller turned the $6,453,979 over to the Societe Suisse Pour Valeurs De Metaux without investigating the validity of that firm's claims to the funds.

The American Metals company, owned by Germans, was impounded during the war by A. Michell Palmer, alien property custodian. Its stock was sold and the proceeds were deposited in the treasury.

Immediately after the Harding administration came in Daugherty and Miller were appointed to their offices. Six months later, it is said, they accepted the bribe.

According to the indictment, Richard Merton, one of the orginal German owners, paid the $411,000 to the government officials for their services in restoring the property to alien hands.

TURKEY SEEKS LEAGUE SEAT

Spectre of Soviet Russia Also Looms at Geneva.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—With Turkey knocking at the door of the League of Nations, the spectre of soviet Russia is looming once more at Geneva.

Through Munir Bey, its representative at Berne, Turkey has indicated at several capitals its desire to join the league provided it receives assurance of a seat in the council.

Great Britain, through diplomatic channels, has informed Turkey that an essential preliminary condition to her acceptance by the league is the revision of the Russo-Turkish treaty, particularly the neutrality clause which provides that Turkey remain neutral if Russia becomes involved in war, even though Russia be the aggressor, and vice-versa.

Great Britain contends that this clause violates the league covenant, inasmuch as if Russia should attack a member of the league, Turkey, as all other members, would be obligated to take measures against Russia.

Mrs. McCormick to Seek Illinois Governor's Seat

Mrs. Medill McCormick, widow of the late Senator Medill McCormick, may be a candidate for governor of her home state of Illinois, according to her friends. She has long been active in political circles.

Officials Seek Mazer

today with the return of United States Attorney A. E. Bernsteen from his vacation.

The first move will be the recommendation to the United States attorney general that Louis Mazer, one of the three named in the murder indictment be returned to Canton for arraignment.

This recommendation will be made, Bernsteen said, in view of the fact that Mazer is held here on a liquor conspiracy charge brought by federal authorities, and proper procedure specified that he be released to Stark county authorities by order of the United States attorney general only.

It was learned that a deputy sheriff from Canton was en route to Bernsteen's office to arrange for Mazer's release to Stark county authorities.

Although he will not be permitted to return with Mazer today, Stark county authorities will be duly notified when the release is issued by the attorney general, Bernsteen said.

Plan to Grill Mazer.

The second step will be the grilling of Mazer today by Bernsteen in an effort to break through Mazer's hitherto impenetrable reserve regarding the murder and his reiterations of innocence.

Further evidence in the slaying and those connected with it, which has so far not been revealed is expected to be secured by Bernsteen through the squad of federal dry and narcotic operatives thrown into the field by him, and given orders to delve into vice conditions as they exist in Canton.

A round-up of federal law violators is expected by the end of the week, it was learned from an official source.

Statements taken from those arrested will probably bring to light evidence regarding the identity of the trigger-man in the murder, "together with the evidence about the higher-ups," which has not been revealed heretofore, the fighting district attorney said.

A detailed report of operations of federal agents in Canton and vicinity together with his own deductions concerning the Mellett murder was being prepared today by Howell Leuck, assistant United States district attorney who was placed in charge of the federal probe by Bernsteen.

Clean Up Looms.

"There will be some pretty big boys enmeshed in our net when we get through investigating the wholesale rum ring down there," Leuck said.

"We have the dope on them and no matter what they do or how they squirm they won't wriggle off our hook," he added.

Joseph R. Roach, vice fighting Chicago attorney who handled the investigation of the Mellett murder, and is now in Chicago, is expected to confer with Bernsteen about Sept. 16, when he will lay evidence regarding the criminal activities of the "higher-ups" which may result in the federal grand jury returning indictments.

Rain Floods Wellsville

vised coal fires were used as the people breakfasted.

The city went without fuel until 10:30 o'clock last night when a temporary line was laid by the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Co., furnishing gas from the Steubenville end.

One of the breaks occured under stress of a slip in the west end of Wellsville and the other, of undetermined cause, occurred in the east end of the city, in the river. A gas company diver arrived here today and will go after the leak as soon as the current in the river abates.

Veritable torrents of water poured over the East Liverpool-Wellsville road during the heaviest storm. The highway bore every resemblance of a millrace, water running curb deep from Walker's to Brady's cut.

Rocks On Roadway.

At the top of Brady's cut, a gushing waterfall overlooking the hillside poured water, rocks and dirt into the roadway. Water from the embankment above the road at Walker's ran westwardly in the road. The streams overflowed at the lowest point, at the foot of Brady's cut, and swept over on to the street car tracks, washing out a huge section of the eastbound rails.

One-way traffic was in order Sunday as loads of earth were conveyed to the spot for a fill.

State highway department men and trucks from Lisbon put the highway in shape for traffic again Sunday.

Street Commissioner Buzzard and department employes were busy here today cleaning up streets, strewn with rocks and earth as a result of numerous small slips.

A wooden culvert was washed out in California hollow.

PLAN TO BEGIN WORK AT NEW ROCK SPRINGS

Old Scenic Railway Will be Torn Down.

PLANT NEW LAWN

Weiner Roasts, Barbecues on Fall-Winter Program.

With passing of Labor Day improvements will be started in Rock Springs park at once by the new manager and lessee, C. C. MacDonald, it was announced today.

New Rock Springs, as the renovated park is to be called, is to be completely changed, improved and put into shape with new lawns taking the place of the present tangled undergrowth; new settings of trees; landscape gardening; enlarged picnic facilities; new rides and amusements—all are part of the improvement program that is to be begun at once.

The old scenic railway is to be torn down and the lumber used for erection of other smaller buildings in the park. After the whole place has been put in good shape, according to Manager MacDonald, the entire group of buildings will be given several coats of paint.

Buildings are to be re-roofed in a Miami-striped combination and boardwalks are to be constructed along the shores of the lagoon.

"When the spring of 1927 rolls around," declared MacDonald, "the name New Rock Springs park will certainly be deserved, because there will be so many changes that the place will be entirely new."

During the fall and winter the public will be invited to inspect the progress of the new features and changes being made and added. Weiner roasts, bonfire parties and barbecues will be a part of the fall and winter seasons' program.

Several changes have already been made by the group of workmen who have been on the job since MacDonald took over the park early in August.

If Tired, Worn-Out, and Run-Down Regain Vigor Thru Gland Treatment

Gland secretions are called hormones—mysterious messengers which Science has discovered exert a remarkable influence on health, strength and vitality.

When the glands function normally, they supply these vitalizing hormones (or secretions) which are essential to physical well-being. And when the glands fail to function, health fails.

Now, glandular treatment, which is indorsed by eminent scientists and physicians of this country and Europe, is being used by thousands of men and women to help overcome a weakened, worn-out, run-down, exhausted condition and to regain the strength, vigor and vitality that are the natural benefits resulting from a normal glandular system.

Glandogen, the new scientific gland tonic, provides a simple method of taking glandular treatment. Glandogen is prepared in convenient tablet form, for both men and women. Accept no substitutes, insist on genuine Glandogen, the original gland tonic

A flivver shied into her; she is now nursing a broken leg and a variety of lesser injuries.

Bell Company Cites Saving Under New Rates.

Ohio telephone subscribers will save approximately $100,000 per year in the proposed reduction in long distance telephone charges which will become effective Oct. 1, Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the local exchange, announced today.

The reduction in the country will mean a saving of about $3,000,000, telephone company officials claim. The new rates apply to points 88 miles distant and outside of Ohio.

The principal changes are:

No change on calls to points up to 88 miles; from 88 miles to 90 miles rates reduced 5 ments; 90 to 96 miles rates as at present; 96 to 100 miles rates reduced 5 cents; 100 to 110 miles rates same as at present; 110 to 112 miles rates increased 5 cents; 112 to 128 miles rates same as at present; on calls to points beyond 128 miles the only changes are reductions.

New evening rates providing for a reduction of 25 per cent on all station-to-station calls between 7 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. which are now at full rates.

New night rates on all station-to-station calls between 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m., providing for a reduction of 50 per cent. At present the reduction between 8:30 p. m. and midnight is 50 percent and from midnight to 4:30 a. m. is 75 per cent.

Extending the reversal privilege which now applies only on person-to-person calls to station-to-station calls, making it possible to reverse charges on calls on which evening and night discounts apply.

In its silver casket the body of Rudolph Valentino leaves the church of St. Malachy, "the actors' church," New York, while a huge throng stands hushed. Only 600 persons were admitted to the church during the funeral, but outside many thousands stood waiting to pay a final tribute to the departed idol of the screen.

WHY DENY YOURSELF THE BEST IN MOTOR CAR BODIES

The finest of the new cars in all price classes have now been announced—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

All offer vastly greater values than ever before in motor car history.

All register amazing advantages in performance and ease and economy of operation.

But the greatest factor of their new glory is described in a single phrase—Body by Fisher.

Here is their supreme beauty—setting absolutely new standards in charm of design and interior fitting.

Here are unequalled factors of safety which add so much to your comfort and confidence.

Here are exclusive conveniences and niceties which do, indeed, make the car with Body by Fisher superior in its class.

No matter what mechanical developments may allure you, it is the body of your car with which you live most intimately—that is why the General Motors units, makers of the best of the new cars in all price classes, point so proudly to the emblem—Body by Fisher.

With the finest of the market to choose from there is no reason why you should deny yourself the greater safety, beauty and comfort which only a Body by Fisher can give.

PLAN TO BEGIN WORK AT NEW ROCK SPRINGS

Old Scenic Railway Will be Torn Down.

PLANT NEW LAWN

Weiner Roasts, Barbecues on Fall-Winter Program.

With passing of Labor Day improvements will be started in Rock Springs park at once by the new manager and lessee, C. C. MacDonald, it was announced today.

New Rock Springs, as the renovated park is to be called, is to be completely changed, improved and put into shape with new lawns taking the place of the present tangled undergrowth; new settings of trees; landscape gardening; enlarged picnic facilities; new rides and amusements—all are part of the improvement program that is to be begun at once.

The old scenic railway is to be torn down and the lumber used for erection of other smaller buildings in the park. After the whole place has been put in good shape, according to Manager MacDonald, the entire group of buildings will be given several coats of paint.

Buildings are to be re-roofed in a Miami-striped combination and boardwalks are to be constructed along the shores of the lagoon.

"When the spring of 1927 rolls around," declared MacDonald, "the name New Rock Springs park will certainly be deserved, because there will be so many changes that the place will be entirely new."

During the fall and winter the public will be invited to inspect the progress of the new features and changes being made and added. Weiner roasts, bonfire parties and barbecues will be a part of the fall and winter seasons' program.

Several changes have already been made by the group of workmen who have been on the job since MacDonald took over the park early in August.

JONES FACES BATTLE OF LIFE TO RETAIN AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

THE National Amateur golf title for 1926 stands between Bobby Jones and a monopoly on the major titles in reach of an amateur player.

Victory in that event, to be staged at Baltusrol, Sept. 13, will give the Atlanta marvel—

The British Open Championship.

The American Open Championship for the second time in four years.

The National Amateur Championship for the third year in succession.

Because of this wonderful playing in the tourneys todate, Jones goes into this, his last major struggle of the summer, a long favorite. But there is a grand and glorious field of simon pures waiting to down Bobby the Valiant. Not because they want to see his hopes for a clean sweep dashed, but because they have the natural ambition of any golfer, to annex one of the coveted titles. And hasn't Bobby won enough for a while?

If there lurks within the ranks of the rival amateurs entered in the tourney one who has an outstanding chance to turn back the Georgian my choice would be George Von Elm.

For two reasons.

First, Von Elm has been "coming up" for the last two years. He was one of the leading "youngsters" before the present season.

Second, he proved his readiness to step into a big title by fighting it out with Bobby Jones in the British open. He and Al Watrous, professional, ranked next to the Atlanta youth in that tourney.

But Von Elm will have plenty of competition for the honor of beating Bobby. No less a personage than Watts Gunn, protege friend and fellow townsman of Jones, is entered. Gunn is remembered as the untried youth who forced Jones to the limit in the semi-final of the open a year ago.

Then there are Roland MacKenzie and those old campaigners, Chic Evans, Bob Gardner, Jess Guilford and Francis Ouimet.

But probably of more interest than the recitation of the names of these popular stars is the list of newcomers entered.

Lester Bolstad. Heard of him? Well he's the lad who won the national public links title recently. Carl F. Kaufman? He's the lad who fought it out with Bolstad for the title.

Hamilton Gardner II and Henry W. Comstock? Two Buffalo youths and both performing brilliantly in sectional and public links affairs this season.

Paul Haviland? He's the brilliant young star who was defeated by Freddy Lamprecht in the national intercollegiate tourney. That Lamprecht himself is unable to play is regretted.

Winthrop A. Hersey, Wellesley, Mass.? Star who has won his spurs in the intercollegiate ranks.

And there are others.

The absence of Jess Sweetser from the tourney will be noted of course. Sweetser was stricken ill after his brilliant play in the British amateur tourney, which he won. He has remained out of competition of recent weeks to safeguard his health.

League Clubs Clean Up Postponed Games

Positions Unchanged as Result of Epidemic of "Mexican Standoffs."

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The positions of the pennant contenders in both leagues were unchanged this morning as a result of an epidemic of Mexican stand-offs in the holiday double-headers, the Cardinals, still one game ahead of the Reds in the National league race, clash with the faltering Pirates again today, while the Reds take on the Cubs.

As the Yankees and Indians both split double-headers, New York's lead is still six games. The even break was to New York's advantage, however, as both teams now have only 20 games to play. Washington took third place away from the Athletics, but the Senators trail Cleveland by four games.

SERIES RIVALS STAGE 0-0 TIE

Game Called in Sixth on Account of Darkness.

With both hurlers bearing down and neither team able to reach the plate, the third game of the Midland-East Liverpool All Star series for the inter-city title Saturday at Midland ended in the sixth frame when darkness made it impossible to continue hostilities.

Up until that point the East Liverpool contingents had nicked Church, Midland moundsman, for only two safeties, and Bennett had allowed the Pennsylvanians five, all scattered and none damaging.

The series will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at Smith field. East Liverpool has won the two games played thus far and needs only another to make it unanimous.

RESERVES DROP TWO TO DRUGS

Bulger Nine Cops Both Ends of Double Header.

Bulger Drugs cracked the Chester Reserves' winning streak yesterday afternoon at Smith field by taking both ends of a double-header, 4 to 2, and 3 to 2.

In the inaugural inning of the first game, after White had been retired, Ferguson doubled, advanced on Horwell's sacrifice and scored on Smith's single to left.

In Chester's half, Maley was safe on White's error. He was sacrificed to second by Hannah and scored on W. Bennett's single over second. The latter stole second and scored on Kirkwood's single over short.

The Drugs tied the score in the second when Doc. Kinsey singled and went to second when John got a walk. He scored on Green's single to center. The Drugs went into the lead in the fifth when White singled to left. Ferguson flew to short and Horwell struck out. Smith stole second, White going to third, and both scored when L. Reese dropped a hard hit Texas leaguer between first and second. Kinsey fanned nine Reserves during the game.

Schneidmiller gave the Reserves five scattered hits in the second clash and fanned five.

TAGGING ALL --BASES--

After bowing to Flint Rhem in the morning contest, 8 to 1, the Pirates rallied behind Ray Kremer's pitching and downed the Cardinals, 4 to 2. Cuyler drove in the winning runs in the matinee.

Although held to two hits, the Cubs took advantage of Cincinnati's four errors and hung up a 2 to 0 victory. The Reds broke out in base hits in the second game, however, and won easily, 7 to 4. Cincinnati's pennant prospects suffered a severe blow when Pitcher Jakie May was spiked and laid up for the season.

Cy Williams pickled two homers as the Phillies broke even with Brooklyn. Vance beat the Phils in the opener, 8 to 6, but the Quakers pounded out an 8 to 2 victory in the second game.

Washington made it ten straight by slamming the Red Sox for a two to one setback, General Crowder holding the Sox to two hits. The Senators took third place away from the A's by the fraction of a point.

The White Sox got back to the .500 mark by taking both ends of a double-header from the Tigers, 5 to 4 and 7 to 3.

Chester-Turk Nash Are Billed Tonight

No Date Set for "Baby World's Series" Pending Outcome of Contests in Which Leading Pennant Rivals Will Figure.

CITY Industrial Baseball League clubs this week start their post-season cleanup of postponed contests

With the scheduled season at an end, clubs of the circuit will be compelled to play off a number of games laid over from various dates along the second half route in order to determine chances for the "Baby's world's series."

No date has been set for the series, in which Newell Laughlin nine will be one of the contenders as a result of its victory in the first half, until several of these postponed contests are out of the way, enabling league officials to act definitely.

Chester and Turk-Nash are the second half pennant possibilities, with odds favoring the West Virginians because of their three and one-half game lead at the present time.

The two rivals are slated to duel this evening at Smith Field in a postponed game, beginning at 5:30 o'clock.

Riley's club, which won the league championship last year in the series with Newell, has four contests ahead and Turk-Nash has seven, according to league officials, and practically all of the other teams have at least two or three apiece.

It is not likely that the complete schedule of postponed games, where teams down in the standing are billed against each other, will be played, in view of the fact that they would have nothing to do with determining the pennant fight.

LOCAL DRIVERS WIN AT CADIZ

Two Cars Finish in Money in 75-mile Event.

East Liverpool race drivers finished in the money in the anual Labor Day dirt track event at Cadiz, copping second and third places and threatening the winner.

The event, originally billed for 100 miles, was cut to 75, in view of threatening weather and was won by Reichenbach, of Orrvile, in a "Fronty-Chevy."

Ray Seitz, of the Seitz Battery Co., this city, was second, in an Overland Special; and W. N. Simms, of the Simms Motor Co., third in a Chalmers Special. Simms finished right behind the leaders, his chances being hampered by trouble in his car's cooling system.

Simms and Seitz probably will enter the East Palestine race on September 11.

Has Champ Lost His Sense of Distance?

They Say He's Missing a Lot of Punches But Experts Say He won't be Missing Those Short Ones in the Ring Against Tunney.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 7.—Can a man who has been out of the ring for three years achieve almost perfect condition and yet, permanently lose his judgment of distance. This doesn't stand to reason and it is the only question, as I see it, that Jack Dempsey will have to answer between now and the night of Sept 23.

His condition is excellent. His speed has lost none of the old sparkle during the years of idleness. He is hitting well, whenever the opposing chin is there to be hit, but is missing a lot of punches, although camp followers assure me that he doing so with less frequency than at Saratoga.

That is well. If Jack Dempsey is to beat Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship of the world, he must hit him. Nobody ever scored a knockout or earned a decision by fanning the other man's pompadour.

Must Hit To Hurt.

However, if one would believe half he hears and all he sees, this element of uncertainty is the only thing that will serve to make a contest of this fight. Give Dempsey condition, give him his speed and the old will to win, and you have quite a fighter. Add even a dash of his former accuracy and it is difficult to see how any man of the present era can beat him; least of all a heavyweight whom one might term a rather insincere hitter.

But he can't hurt Tunney without hitting him. If he continues to miss right up to the day of the fight, then it is possible that the challenger might be able to stab his way to the title.

This, however, brings back the old argument of the hitter versus the boxer: The former might only have to land one good one to bring the stepper down to his own speed. If he lands it in the first round—which, by the way, always has been Dempsey's best—the fight is usually a brief one. If he lands it in the last rounds, he can and often does change the entire complexion of the fight. Dempsey will bull's eye at least one of his punches in ten rounds.

Workouts Are Different.

Another angle that the critics apparently ignore is that Jack Dempsey in a workout is quite another person from the Jack Dempsey under fire in the ring. He crowds his man, there, hitting short, murderous punches that, naturall, haven't the same chance of missing. The leads that Martin Turke and others were slipping yesterday came at long range.

He boxes that way in the training camp for two reasons. One of them is to develop foot work; the other to conserve the current supply of chins. If Dempsey swarmed over these babies every time out, he'd have the camp to himself overnight. Off hand, I would say that it is an excellent bet that he will cut loose, without fear or favor, in the last ten days before the fight. By that time he won't care whether the boys leave or how soon.

The intelligentsia also has been at a loss to account for the fact that the champion has been and is being hit with great readiness. I doubt if Dempsey is greatly worried about this state of affairs. Every man he has fought has hit him. All he asks is that they keep on trying, so that he can get a clean shot at the button.

He's Been Hit Before.

Besides, this is the man who was hit on the jowl by Firpo, Carpentier and Willard and if he could laugh that collection off, it is difficult to see how Tunney's light hitting can annoy him.

The chances are that Dempsey is figuring on marching right into everything that Gene might have in order to get in close for the killing, if any.

That he will be in condition to absorb punishment is now a foregone conclusion. Dempsey worked 40 minutes yesterday and, at the end, breathed as easily as a man in a morris chair. He perspired profusely in the first minute of play, another favorable sign. A third was the fact that his legs—hard, brown and trim—moved about as though operated on steel springs

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,
Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

For a low ball the arc of the swing must be flattened, and for a high ball the arc is made more circular. To flatten the arc you do not use a flat swing necessarily. Instead place the feet a few inches farther apart for swing, when a low ball is wanted. For a high ball that will get up into the wind and float with it, place feet a few inches nearer together. If you stand ordinarily with the feet 18 inches apart, for a law ball let them be about four or five inches further apart and, for a high ball, that much closer together. Then swing in the regular way. The extra spread of the feet is accomplished almost wholly by moving the right foot back or forward as the case may be. That is, if you are to stand for a low ball move the left foot forward one inch, say, and the right foot back four inches. Be careful not to go forward the whole five inches when playing for a low ball or instead you will get a skied ball.

PYLE'S WILES LURE MARY

For $50,000 Miss Browne Becomes Pro Netter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Miss Mary K. Browne, of Santa Monica, Cal., former national women's tennis champion and captain of the American team that brought the Wightman cup back from England, will turn professional today. She will meet with Charles C. Pyle, promoter, to formally sign a contract with him to appear in exhibition matches with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the latter's tour of the United States, beginning in New York on October 9.

"My action probably will shock tennis players and followers, but I feel that what I am doing what will be for the good of the game in the end and take a lot of hypocrisy out of lawn tennis in this country," Miss Browne said.

"I do not want to do anything that will injure tennis but it is a matter of business necessity. I am dependent upon my own resources and Mr. Pyle's offer was such I could not refuse it."

While the terms of the contract have not been revealed, it is reported that Miss Browne will be guaranteed $15,0000, with five per cent of the profits. It is estimated that the tour will net her nearly $50,000.

CUT $100,000 IN PHONE COST

Bell Company Cites Saving Under New Rates.

Ohio telephone subscribers will save approximately $100,000 per year in the proposed reduction in long distance telephone charges which will become effective Oct. 1, Frank Swaney, commercial manager of the local exchange, announced today.

The reduction in the country will mean a saving of about $3,000,000, telephone company officials claim. The new rates apply to points 88 miles distant and outside of Ohio.

The principal changes are:

No change on calls to points up to 88 miles; from 88 miles to 90 miles rates reduced 5 ments; 90 to 96 miles rates as at present; 96 to 100 miles rates reduced 5 cents; 100 to 110 miles rates same as at present; 110 to 112 miles rates increased 5 cents; 112 to 128 miles rates same as at present; on calls to points beyond 128 miles the only changes are reductions.

New evening rates providing for a reduction of 25 per cent on all station-to-station calls between 7 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. which are now at full rates.

New night rates on all station-to-station calls between 8:30 p. m. and 4:30 a. m., providing for a reduction of 50 per cent. At present the reduction between 8:30 p. m. and midnight is 50 percent and from midnight to 4:30 a. m. is 75 per cent.

Extending the reversal privilege which now applies only on person-to-person calls to station-to-station calls, making it possible to reverse charges on calls on which evening and night discounts apply.

Funeral of Rudolph Valentino Attracts Thousands as Stars of Stage and Screen Pay Final Tribute

In its silver casket the body of Rudolph Valentino leaves the church of St. Malachy, "the actors' church," New York, while a huge throng stands hushed. Only 600 persons were admitted to the church during the funeral, but outside many thousands stood waiting to pay a final tribute to the departed idol of the screen.

WHY DENY YOURSELF THE BEST IN MOTOR CAR BODIES

The finest of the new cars in all price classes have now been announced—Cadillac, Buick, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile and Pontiac.

All offer vastly greater values than ever before in motor car history.

All register amazing advantages in performance and ease and economy of operation.

But the greatest factor of their new glory is described in a single phrase—Body by Fisher.

Here is their supreme beauty—setting absolutely new standards in charm of design and interior fitting.

Here are unequalled factors of safety which add so much to your comfort and confidence.

Here are exclusive conveniences and niceties which do, indeed, make the car with Body by Fisher superior in its class.

No matter what mechanical developments may allure you, it is the body of your car with which you live most intimately—that is why the General Motors units, makers of the best of the new cars in all price classes, point so proudly to the emblem—Body by Fisher.

With the finest of the market to choose from there is no reason why you should deny yourself the greater safety, beauty and comfort which only a Body by Fisher can give.

Senate Millionaires and House Plebes Lead Campaigns of Both Big Parties

"The Senate may be a millionaires' club but the House is a poor man's retreat." An almost tacit agreement that this is as it should be finds the major party campaign leaders in the Senate both men of great means, while the House campaign heads are neither in the blue book nor the higher surtax brackets. The Senators are Lawrence C. Phipps, of Colorado, and Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island. The former, Republican leader, is the richest man in the Senate, and Gerry is the richest of Senate Democrats. The campaigners in the House, Will R. Wood (Indiana) and William C. Oldfield (Arkansas Democrat) are much more at home in political give-and-take than in the ballroom.

Yale University To Study Students Who Flunk in Work

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Yale University intends to learn, in the future, why any duly enrolled student flunks his work. The department of psychology at the University will proceed into such study with the opening of the new University term late in September.

The student who after passing entrance examinations fails to keep up with his work and fails in the term examinations will be the particular subject of attention and eventually, the University officials hope, there will be no more flunking.

Due allowance will be made for the student who does not spend enough time at study. He will be treated in another fashion. But the university believes that some students fail in spite of long and earnest study and officials want to know the exact reason.

cars. But now they are seeing the folly of wasting gas, power, and speed in negotiating stiff grades, and they are not so much interested in the matter of climbing a hill without shifting gears as they are in getting where they are going without undue delays and with a minimum of fuel and wear and tear on their machines. Thus, hills are doomed, and with their going will come a demand for a smoother type of highway surface, the banking of all curves, weather-proof road construction, and the like.

"Genius turns to the roads," concludes Mr. Ullman. "The new era is under way. Our roads are not good enough for our cars, and the engineers know it. Within another ten years, it is predicted, the highways of America will be radically different and the simplified highway of today will be recorded pictorially in the museums along with the automobile that has no starter, no closed body, no four-wheel brakes, and no balloon tires."

JONES FACES BATTLE OF LIFE TO RETAIN AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

THE National Amateur golf title for 1926 stands between Bobby Jones and a monopoly on the major titles in reach of an amateur player.

Victory in that event, to be staged at Baltusrol, Sept. 13, will give the Atlanta marvel—

The British Open Championship.

The American Open Championship for the second time in four years.

The National Amateur Championship for the third year in succession.

Because of this wonderful playing in the tourneys todate, Jones goes into this, his last major struggle of the summer, a long favorite. But there is a grand and glorious field of simon pures waiting to down Bobby the Valiant. Not because they want to see his hopes for a clean sweep dashed, but because they have the natural ambition of any golfer, to annex one of the coveted titles. And hasn't Bobby won enough for a while?

If there lurks within the ranks of the rival amateurs entered in the tourney one who has an outstanding chance to turn back the Georgian my choice would be George Von Elm.

For two reasons.

First, Von Elm has been "coming up" for the last two years. He was one of the leading "youngsters" before the present season.

Second, he proved his readiness to step into a big title by fighting it out with Bobby Jones in the British open. He and Al Watrous, professional, ranked next to the Atlanta youth in that tourney.

But Von Elm will have plenty of competition for the honor of beating Bobby. No less a personage than Watts Gunn, protege friend and fellow townsman of Jones, is entered. Gunn is remembered as the untried youth who forced Jones to the limit in the semi-final of the open a year ago.

Then there are Roland MacKenzie and those old campaigners, Chic Evans, Bob Gardner, Jess Guilford and Francis Ouimet.

But probably of more interest than the recitation of the names of these popular stars is the list of newcomers entered.

Lester Bolstad. Heard of him? Well he's the lad who won the national public links title recently. Carl F. Kaufman? He's the lad who fought it out with Bolstad for the title.

Hamilton Gardner II and Henry W. Comstock? Two Buffalo youths and both performing brilliantly in sectional and public links affairs this season.

Paul Haviland? He's the brilliant young star who was defeated by Freddy Lamprecht in the national intercollegiate tourney. That Lamprecht himself is unable to play is regretted.

Winthrop A. Hersey, Wellesley, Mass.? Star who has won his spurs in the intercollegiate ranks.

And there are others.

The absence of Jess Sweetser from the tourney will be noted of course. Sweetser was stricken ill after his brilliant play in the British amateur tourney, which he won. He has remained out of compettition of recent weeks to safeguard his health.

Has Champ Lost His Sense of Distance?

They Say He's Missing a Lot of Punches But Experts Say He won't be Missing Those Short Ones in the Ring Against Tunney.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 7.—Can a man who has been out of the ring for three years achieve almost perfect condition and yet, permanently lose his judgment of distance. This doesn't stand to reason and it is the only question, as I see it, that Jack Dempsey will have to answer between now and the night of Sept 23.

His condition is excellent. His speed has lost none of the old sparkle during the years of idleness. He is hitting well, whenever the opposing chin is there to be hit, but is missing a lot of punches, although camp followers assure me that he doing so with less frequency than at Saratoga.

That is well. If Jack Dempsey is to beat Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship of the world, he must hit him. Nobody ever scored a knockout or earned a decision by fanning the other man's pompadour.

Must Hit To Hurt.

However, if one would believe half he hears and all he sees, this element of uncertainty is the only thing that will serve to make a contest of this fight. Give Dempsey condition, give him his speed and the old will to win, and you have quite a fighter. Add even a dash of his former accuracy and it is difficult to see how any man of the present era can beat him; least of all a heavyweight whom one might term a rather insincere hitter.

But he can't hurt Tunney without hitting him. If he continues to miss right up to the day of the fight, then it is possible that the challenger might be able to stab his way to the title.

This, however, brings back the old argument of the hitter versus the boxer: The former might only have to land one good one to bring the stepper down to his own speed. If he lands it in the first round—which, by the way, always has been Dempsey's best—the fight is usually a brief one. If he lands it in the last rounds, he can and often does change the entire complexion of the fight. Dempsey will bull's eye at least one of his punches in ten rounds.

Workouts Are Different.

Another angle that the critics apparently ignore is that Jack Dempsey in a workout is quite another person from the Jack Dempsey under fire in the ring. He crowds his man, there, hitting short, murderous punches that, naturall, haven't the same chance of missing. The leads that Martin Turke and others were slipping yesterday came at long range.

He boxes that way in the training camp for two reasons. One of them is to develop foot work; the other to conserve the current supply of chins. If Dempsey swarmed over these babies every time out, he'd have the camp to himself overnight. Off hand, I would say that it is an excellent bet that he will cut loose, without fear or favor, in the last ten days before the fight. By that time he won't care whether the boys leave or how soon.

The intelligentsia also has been at a loss to account for the fact that the champion has been and is being hit with great readiness. I doubt if Dempsey is greatly worried about this state of affairs. Every man he has fought has hit him. All he asks is that they keep on trying, so that he can get a clean shot at the button.

He's Been Hit Before.

Besides, this is the man who was hit on the jowl by Firpo, Carpentier and Willard and if he could laugh that collect'on off, it is difficult to see how Tunney's light hitting can annoy him.

The chances are that Dempsey is figuring on marching right into everything that Gene might have in order to get in close for the killing, if any.

That he will be in condition to absorb punishment is now a foregone conclusion. Demnsey worked 40 minutes yesterday and, at the end, breathed as easily as a man in a morris chair. He perspired profusely in the first minute of play, another favorable sign. A third was the fact that his legs—hard, brown and trim—moved that wonderful body of his about as though operated on steel springs.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans.

For a low ball the arc of the swing must be flattened, and for a high ball the arc is made more circular. To flatten the arc you do not use a flat swing necessarily. Instead place the feet a few inches farther apart for swing, when a low ball is wanted. For a high ball that will get up into the wind and float with it, place feet a few inches nearer together. If you stand ordinarily with the feet 18 inches apart, for a law ball let them be about four or five inches further apart and, for a high ball, that much closer together. Then swing in the regular way. The extra spread of the feet is accomplished almost wholly by moving the right foot back or forward as the case may be. That is, if you are to stand for a low ball move the left foot forward one inch, say, and the right foot back four inches. Be careful not to go forward the whole five inches when playing for a low ball or instead you will get a skied ball.

PYLE'S WILES LURE MARY

For $50,000 Miss Browne Becomes Pro Netter.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Miss Mary K. Browne, of Santa Monica, Cal., former national women's tennis champion and captain of the American team that brought the Wightman cup back from England, will turn professional today. She will meet with Charles C. Pyle, promoter, to formally sign a contract with him to appear in exhibition matches with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the latter's tour of the United States, beginning in New York on October 9.

"My action probably will shock tennis players and followers, but I feel that what I am doing what will be for the good of the game in the end and take a lot of hypocrisy out of lawn tennis in this country." Miss Browne said.

"I do not want to do anything that will injure tennis but it is a matter of business necessity. I am dependent upon my own resources and Mr. Pyle's offer was such I could not refuse it."

While the terms of the contract have not been revealed, it is reported that Miss Browne will be guaranteed $15,0000, with five per cent of the profits. It is estimated that the tour will net her nearly $50,000.

League Clubs Clean Up Postponed Games

Positions Unchanged as Result of Epidemic of "Mexican Standoffs."

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The positions of the pennant contenders in both leagues were unchanged this morning as a result of an epidemic of Mexican stand-offs in the holiday double-headers, the Cardinals, still one game ahead of the Reds in the National league race, clash with the faltering Pirates again today, while the Reds take on the Cubs.

As the Yankees and Indians both split double-headers, New York's lead is still six games. The even break was to New York's advantage, however, as both teams now have only 20 games to play. Washington took third place away from the Athletics, but the Senators trail Cleveland by four games.

SERIES RIVALS STAGE 0-0 TIE

Game Called in Sixth on Account of Darkness.

With both hurlers bearing down and neither team able to reach the plate, the third game of the Midland-East Liverpool All Star series for the inter-city title Saturday at Midland ended in the sixth frame when darkness made it impossible to continue hostilities.

Up until that point the East Liverpool contingents had nicked Church, Midland moundsman, for only two safeties, and Bennett had allowed the Pennsylvanians five, all scattered and none damaging.

The series will be resumed tomorrow afternoon at Smith field. East Liverpool has won the two games played thus far and needs only another to make it unanimous.

RESERVES DROP TWO TO DRUGS

Bulger Nine Cops Both Ends of Double Header.

Bulger Drugs cracked the Chester Reserves' winning streak yesterday afternoon at Smith field by taking both ends of a double-header, 4 to 2, and 3 to 2.

In the inaugural inning of the first game, after White had been retired, Ferguson doubled, advanced on Horwell's sacrifice and scored on Smith's single to left.

In Chester's half, Maley was safe on White's error. He was sacrificed to second by Hannah and scored on W. Bennett's single over second. The latter stole second and scored on Kirkwood's single over short.

The Drugs tied the score in the second when Doc. Kinsey singled and went to second when John got a walk. He scored on Green's single to center. The Drugs went into the lead in the fifth when White singled to left. Ferguson flew to short and Horwell struck out. Smith stole second, White going to third, and both scored when L. Reese dropped a hard hit Texas leaguer between first and second. Kinsey fanned nine Reserves during the game.

Schneidmiller gave the Reserves five scattered hits in the second clash and fanned five.

TAGGING ALL --BASES--

After bowing to Flint Rhem in the morning contest, 8 to 1, the Pirates rallied behind Ray Kremer's pitching and downed the Cardinals, 4 to 2. Cuyler drove in the winning runs in the matinee.

Although held to two hits, the Cubs took advantage of Cincinnati's four errors and hung up a 2 to 0 victory. The Reds broke out in base hits in the second game, however, and won easily, 7 to 4. Cincinnati's pennant prospects suffered a severe blow when Pitcher Jakie May was spiked and laid up for the season.

Cy Williams pickled two homers as the Phillies broke even with Brooklyn. Vance beat the Phils in the opener, 8 to 6, but the Quakers pounded out an 8 to 2 victory in the second game.

Washington made it ten straight by slamming the Red Sox for a two to one setback, General Crowder holding the Sox to two hits. The Senators took third place away from the A's by the fraction of a point.

The White Sox got back to the .500 mark by taking both ends of a double-header from the Tigers, 5 to 4 and 7 to 3.

Chester-Turk Nash Are Billed Tonight

No Date Set for "Baby World's Series" Pending Outcome of Contests in Which Leading Pennant Rivals Will Figure.

CITY Industrial Baseball League clubs this week start their post-season cleanup of postponed contests

With the scheduled season at an end, clubs of the circuit will be compelled to play off a number of games laid over from various dates along the second half route in order to determine chances for the "Baby's world's series."

No date has been set for the series, in which Newell Laughlin nine will be one of the contenders as a result of its victory in the first half, until several of these postponed contests are out of the way, enabling league officials to act definitely.

Chester and Turk-Nash are the second half pennant possibilities, with odds favoring the West Virginians because of their three and one-half game lead at the present time.

The two rivals are slated to duel this evening at Smith Field in a postponed game, beginning at 5:30 o'clock.

Riley's club, which won the league championship last year in the series with Newell, has four contests ahead and Turk-Nash has seven, according to league officials, and practically all of the other teams have at least two or three apiece.

It is not likely that the complete schedule of postponed games, where teams down in the standing are billed against each other, will be played, in view of the fact that they would have nothing to do with determining the pennant fight.

LOCAL DRIVERS WIN AT CADIZ

Two Cars Finish in Money in 75-mile Event.

East Liverpool race drivers finished in the money in the anual Labor Day dirt track event at Cadiz, copping second and third places and threatening the winner.

The event, originally billed for 100 miles, was cut to 75, in view of threatening weather and was won by Reichenbach, of Orrville, in a "Fronty-Chevy."

Ray Seitz, of the Seitz Battery Co., this city, was second, in an Overland Special; and W. N. Simms, of the Simms Motor Co., third in a Chalmers Special. Simms finished right behind the leaders, his chances being hampered by trouble in his car's cooling system.

Simms and Seitz probably will enter the East Palestine race on September 11.

Gene Tunney Reads Katharine Brush's Novel, "Glitter"

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Gene Tunney spends his spare time in reading, and his library includes a wide range of novels, treatises and philosophies. He is somewhat partial to Jeffrey Farnol and especially to the "Amateur Gentleman" and the "Broad Highway," but he finds also great interest in the classics and in history. When he is tired he turns to lighter matter such as "Glitter," Katharine Brush's vivid novel of modern youth.

Dutch Submarine Circles Globe; Arrival Arouses U. S. Navy Heads

The recent arrival of the Holland navy submarine KXIII on the Pacific Coast on her journey of 25,000 miles around the globe without consort has aroused considerable discussion among U. S. navy leaders and active "militarists." The submarine, one of the largest to visit this country, is making the trip mainly for the advancement of science, to test undersea gravity, etc., but anti-pacificists point out that a huge number of such submarines could make such a trip from European or Far East shores bent on destruction. Photos show the sub moored at San Francisco and a group of officers in the control pit

Senate Millionaires and House Plebes Lead Campaigns of Both Big Parties

"The Senate may be a millionaires' club but the House is a poor man's retreat." An almost tacit agreement that this is as it should be finds the major party campaign leaders in the Senate both men of great means, while the House campaign heads are neither in the blue book nor the higher surtax brackets. The Senators are Lawrence C. Phipps, of Colorado, and Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island. The former, Republican leader, is the richest man in the Senate, and Gerry is the richest of Senate Democrats. The campaigners in the House, Will R. Wood (Indiana) and William C. Oldfield (Arkansas Democrat) are much more at home in political give-and-take than in the ballroom.

Yale University To Study Students Who Flunk in Work

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Yale University intends to learn, in the future, why any duly enrolled student flunks his work. The department of psychology at the University will proceed into such study with the opening of the new University term late in September.

The student who after passing entrance examinations fails to keep up with his work and fails in the term examinations will be the particular subject of attention and eventually, the University officials hope, there will be no more flunking.

Due allowance will be made for the student who does not spend enough time at study. He will be treated in another fashion. But the university believes that some students fail in spite of long and earnest study and officials want to know the exact reason.

cars. But now they are seeing the folly of wasting gas, power, and speed in negotiating stiff grades, and they are not so much interested in the matter of climbing a hill without shifting gears as they are in getting where they are going without undue delays and with a minimum of fuel and wear and tear on their machines. Thus, hills are doomed, and with their going will come a demand for a smoother type of highway surface, the banking of all curves, weather-proof road construction, and the like.

"Genius turns to the roads," concludes Mr. Ullman. "The new era is under way. Our roads are not good enough for our cars, and the engineers know it. Within another ten years, it is predicted, the highways of America will be radically different and the simplified highway of today will be recorded pictorially in the museums along with the automobile that has no starter, no closed body, no four-wheel brakes, and no balloon tires."

He is somewhat partial to Jeffrey Farnol and especially to the "Amateur Gentleman" and the "Broad Highway," but he finds also great interest in the classics and in history. When he is tired he turns to lighter matter such as "Glitter," Katharine Brush's vivid novel of modern youth.

Dutch Submarine Circles Globe; Arrival Arouses U. S. Navy Heads

The recent arrival of the Holland navy submarine KXIII on the Pacific Coast on her journey of 25,000 miles around the globe without consort has aroused considerable discussion among U. S. navy leaders and active "militarists." The submarine, one of the largest to visit this country, is making the trip mainly for the advancement of science, to test undersea gravity, etc., but anti-pacificists point out that a huge number of such submarines could make such a trip from European or Far East shores bent on destruction. Photos show the sub moored at San Francisco and a group of officers in the control pit
